Year in hand for BA

By Anthony Hilton and Paul Routledge

British Airways will be ready to be sold to the public by the autumn of 1984, almost a year shead of schedule, Sir John King, chairman of the airline, said yesterday.

But the flotation is likely to be delayed until 1985 to avoid a clash with the planned privati-zation of British Telecom, due late next year.

Before the airline can be sold to the private sector, Sir John has repeatedly said, it needs to be making profits at a rate of at least £250m a year. That compares with profits of only £77m announced in June for the 1982-83 financial year, and a loss of £544m the year before

But with the world's airlines rapidly returning to profitability and an rise in demand as the world pulls out of recession, such an improvement is quite ment is keen that the airline be denationalized as soon as possible. Sir John said he was in no panic" about that being delayed until 1985. "I do not think there is any great urgency about 1984. My job was to get the airline ready, which I will have done. The actual timing is a matter for the Government,"

A considerable amount of work still needs to be done to put the airline's finances in order and to alleviate the £1bn burden of debt. Sir John denied that he was asking the Government to write off all or part of this debt, but said that he had to negotiate a form of bridging loan which would then be repaid out of the proceeds of the

Sir John's optimism contrasted strongly with a policy statement from the TUC published today. It says that Britain may not have a viable acrospace industry in 10 years, if the Government fails to take a number of strategic decisions

TUC leaders have called on the Cabinet and British Airways the new high-technology Airbus A320 and to make rapid decisions to avoid tens of thousands of redundancies.

The TUC remains bitterly hostile to the denationalization of British Aerospace.

Sir John King repeated yesterday that he had no intention of buying the A320 at this time. "A decision will be taken at the end of this menth. But the A320 remains a paper peroplane. I am not in the business of launching a new plane. I have had enough trouble launching this airling he said. He did not rule out a purchase of the aircraft sometime in the future, however.

MPs are predicting a repeat of events in late 1981 when Conservative MPs and local authority associations forced Mr Michael Heseltine, who was then Secretary of State for the Environment, to drop legis-lation which would make councils hold referendums of ratepayers when they wanted to put up rates beyond a centrally-fixed limit.

Some MPs, angry that the Government published its White Paper a few dys after Parliament rose for the summer recess, are to seek an early meeting with Mr Patrick Jenkin, the present Secretary of State for the Environment, to warn him that the Bill expected early next year to implement the proposals will have a tough passage because it represents an unwarranted interference with local democracy.

The publication of the pro-posals while MPs are away from Westminster means the opponents have not yet organized a campaign of action or counted heads for any potential re-bellion. But one senior Con-servative said yesterday: "The Government could quite easily get a bloody bose on this one."

Most of the dissatisfaction arises from the Government's failure to come up with more radical proposals for long-term rates reform. Many of the resolutions sent into Conservative Central Office for the annual party conference are highly critical of the Govern-ment and Mr Jenkin could face

Police arm grip blamed for man's death in struggle with officers

and the second second second

Dr Ernest Milford Ward, of Leicester, a retired pathologist, states that the arm grip officers used to overcome Mr Davey's struggles had been banned in the United States and should not have been used in Britain. But he also says that the police were "darned unlucky" that their actions ended in Mr Davey's death.

Mr Davey, aged 40, collapsed on March 11 when the police, who said they thought he was about to head-but them, fell on him with one officer holding him round the throat. His heart stopped during the struggle, and he was taken to Coventry and Warwick Hospital where he was put on a life-support system, but doctors declared him clinically dead and the system was switched off after 11 days. Mr Davey had been held in custody for 17 hours while the police tried to persuade him to go to London to answer questions about the shooting of Mr Patrick O'Nione outside a dockland wine bar.

Dr Milford Ward, who examined Mr Davey's body on him back on his knee and April 17 and spoke to Coventry Davey then fell forward. The policeman then fell on top of him.

"According to my infor-mation, he could have got brain damage from that injury be-cause of the anoxia [lack of oxygen). This grip has been banned by the American police because it is so dangerous, and it should be banned here."

A report on Mr Davey's death was compiled by Mr Charles Horan, Assistant Chief Counstable (Crime) of Greater Manchester Police, and sent to the Director of Public Prosecutions, who is considering whether charges should be brought against police officers. Dr Milford Ward said he would not recommend such action.

Heatwave kills hundreds of birds

By A Staff Reporter

The hot weather has killed many water-based birds in several parts of Britain. The sun and the lack of rain have caused the spread of botulism, which attacks their nervous systems. The Royal Society for the Protection of Birds said vester-day that it had been a very bad year for some birds. Last week more than 100 wildfowl at the Attenborough Nature Reserve. Nottingham, became the latest casualties of Britain's hottest summer since 1976.

Similar incidents have been reported by the Society in Norfolk and in Regent's Park, central London. On the boating lake in Regent's Park about 200 ducks and swans have died and in Norfolk about 130 birds. including gulls, mallards, geese and cools have perished. Mr Tim Stowe of the society explained that botulism causes paralysis which affects the birds' winse, necks and legs and they waste away through their inability to feed and water.

He said that the affected birds are those which live in normally wet areas with fairly dense vegetation. They become breed-ing grounds for botulism when the water table is lowered.

The Thames estuary. Mersey estuary. Firth of Forth and parts of Norfolk, where shallow water can be found close to effluent pipes and rubbish tips, are bad areas for botulism. While Britain's birdlife is suffering, the heat has proved a blessing to other wildlife. The Royal Society for Nature Conservation notes that there have been far more butterflies than usual. Swarms of clouded yellows, painted ladies, red admirals, peacocks and tortoiseshells have been seen throughout the countryside.

Sea swimmers have been stung by Portuguese man o'war jellyfish, which have drifted into British waters.

Large numbers of shark have been seen off the Dorset and Devon coasts. A 24ft basking shark was seen in a Dorset bay.
One benefit of a hot summer is that many sub-tropical birds are attracted to British shores.

For the first time in 40 years a block-winged stilt was spotted on a reserve in East Anglia. @ Wild geese invading farms in search of food are damaging crops in East Anglia, according to the Country Landowners Association. Landowners in Norfolk say that geese have become "an absolute menace" to winter cereals, grass and vegetables. They are demanding a cull.

In the first of a two-part series on Nato's responsibilities in the Mediterranean, RODNEY COWTON, Defence Correspondent, examines the balance of naval power.

It is part of today's conven-tional wisdom that if there should ever be another European war it would be unlikely to begin with a frontal assault through Germany. It would be more likely to arise out of a localized conflict outside the European heartlands which, once out of control, would draw in the superpowers.

The perpetual turmoil around Lebanon and Israel and around Letazon and israel and the present tensions with Libya would easure that the Middle East would come high on anyone's list of areas which are sufficiently combustible to carry in them the risk of such an exceletion. The latest fracas between Moscow and the International Chess Federation (Fide) could current world championship and even threaten the structure of world chess, according to

If they are right, no one will be more disappointed than Gary Kasparov, the brilliant young grandmaster from Baku, who has been preparing to contest the world title since he started playing chess at the age

Kasparov was due to meet Viktor Korchnoi at Pasadena, California, last weekend in the world championship semi-final. Had he played and won, he would have gone on to chal-lenge the winner of the other semi-final between Vasily Smyslov of the Soviet Union and Zoltan Ribli of Hungary for the right to meet Anatoly Karpov, the world champion. In the event, Russia abruptly withdrew from both matches, and Fide declared Korchnoi the winner at Pasadena by default.

Kasparov clearly regrets having to abandon the competition only two steps away from the chance to win the world title at the age of 20. Karpov was 23 when he became world champion. But Kasparov has pub-licly supported the Soviet decision to withdraw, with the proviso that he hopes the match against Korchnol can be

From the seclusion of his home in Baku, Azerbaijan, in the south of the Soviet Union, Kasparov said that the match should have taken place in Rotterdam, and that Fide had not heeded the wishes of the participants. Since that is the Soviet line it is difficult for Kasparov to say anything else. but he - and the Soviet Chess Federation - have their eye on the next Fide congress in October, which they say they hope will reverse the decision.

was very easy and just what I needed", he recalled in an interview.

Lean but well built, with dark good looks, Kasparov is a superstar in a country where chess is a national preoccu-pation. He is well aware of his brilliance, but has a natural, unassuming and rather ironic

He lives quietly at home with his mother - to whom he is devoted - and prefers to play football or read books in English rather than engage in politics. If he became world champion Kasparer would probably not toe the party line and act as a spokesman for Soviet peace policies as willingly as Karpov does. Chess experts doubt however, that Kasparov might have been tempted to follow the example of Korchnoi, who defected from Russia in 1976. Some sources think it likely that the Soviet authorities

If after October the Soviet Union were to form its own "world federation" controlled by the Soviet block and the Third World - as some think it might - Kasparov could lose the chance of becoming a true world champion and would have to settle for winning a Soviet-dominated event.

On the other hand, Kasparov recently said that he enjoyed a "psychological advantage" over most opponents because he was the kind of player who could trust himself to take crucial decisions without hesitation. That kind of strong nerve and resilient character should see Kasparov through a personal and professional crisis which would tax many an older and

The decision was announced dramatically in the Liberian capital of Monrovia on Saturday when the state-controlled radio was interrupted for a special broadcast. According to the sources, the resent mood in Africa has led to hopes here that the years of diploimatic isolation can be ended. Another factor working in Israel's favour is last year's final evacuation of the Sinai desert, territory regarded an African soil.

The handover to Egypt was one of the reasons cited in the Liberian statement which was warmly welcomed yesterday by Mr Yitzhak Shamir, Israel's Foreign Minister. The Liberian decision was taken in the face of concerted Arab pressure against.

They settled for a while in Corbridge but autograph-hunters soon earmarked the spot as a natural break in any journey-between Scotland and the south, and Americans took to planning their summer holidays with a pilgrimage in mind. The Cooksons' new house is 12 miles away, into remote country, on no known route to anywhere, a 300-year-old stone cottage they have added to, on the edge of a reservoir with the moors beyond: Catherine Cookson is standing by the door, an upright, handsome woman in a sage green and lame suit, a little like the headmistress of a select girts' school:

She leads the way. Small in appearance from the outside, the house opens on to a series of yast rooms, two great drawing-rooms, a long dining-room with a mahogany table for 16 and upstairs, reached by a wrought-iron staircase, an immense study with magnificent views over rhododendrons and azaleas to the lake. Everywhere there are rich patterned materials, flock papers and damask, flowered linen, chandeliers and ornaments, porcelain in cabinets, the walls thickly hung withseascapes and sunsets. Off her bedroom is a Hollywood bathroom with a round, raised bath. There is a large white poodle. Everything is very tidy.

Catherine Cookson's sixtieth povel, Hamilton, is published today. It is quite unlike the great melodramatic family sagas for which she is best known and she has had to swing reluctant agents and publishers behind her. "I always wanted to write comedy", she explains. There seems little likelihood however that it will fail to join all her other books on the bestseller list. Catherine Cookson is said to be in the unique position of being the only writer of her kind to have her entire work in print. "People have been writing to me for 20 years. They treat me as family. I get a letter whenever someone has a new baby." Answering her post takes up part of each morning. But by then she will have been at work since seven, sitting on the edge of her bed, talking into a dictaphone. "I took to it like a duck to water." She talks fast, laughing often, with an agrecable stillnorthern voice, occasionally using the Northumberland idiom of her childhood and her heroines: "Me da" tmy father). "I've always been a jabberer. I just talked. I see everything in images. The plot sort of unfolds. Even the dialogue. In the morning, it's all there

Writing, for Catherine Cookson, began with a 16,000-word story turned down by the Shields Daily Gazette, 11 took no firm shape until well after the war. By then she had long since left behind her the extreme poverty of Tyne

Dock, her illegitimacy, her mother's alcoholism and her 12 years in the laundries of various workhouses. But, if the early years of her life were quite exceptionally hard, the middle ones were the most unhappy.

"I now look back on the years between 40 and 50 as a painful nightmare", she wrote in her autobiography. Our Kate. Four miscarriages had been followed by a nervous breakdown which lasted some 10 years, and the final recognition that the nose-bleeds she had suffered since adolescence in fact came from a rare hereditary blood disease. Today bleeding, from tongue and thumbs as well as internally, takes her on repeated emergency night trips to hospital. She dismisses the subject, saying only that the real nuisance is that the is allergic to drugs.

She took 12 years to write Our Kate, which turned out in the end to be more about her mother than herself. "I had 10 rewrite it eight times, each time deleting a bit more of the bitterness". she says. In fact Our Kate is a touching and rather gentle book. By the time it appeared, in 1968, Catherine Cookson was securely established as the popular and prolific writer of extremely readable historical tales. "I have always looked upon writing as a trade", she says. "I simply apprenticed myself to it." She never makes notes, other than for ages, names and colour of eyes of her characters. "I am lucky: I can keep it all in my head. I can just carry on the

Her words suggest complacency. But Catherine Cookson is a dogged researcher and her novels are dense in historical detail. She once went down a mine when the heroine of her current novel lived in mining country, "You see, until I was 16 my world was a short straight line: Jarrow, East Jarrow, Tyne Dock and East Shield, running along the river. Good plain writing, no hyperbole. I would have liked to have studied philosophy. Homespun philosophy, that's what you get in my books."
It took her a while, she says, to stop hankering after "grand houses, and ladies and gentlemen" and turn to writing about the things she knows about extreme poverty, the pawn shop, illegitimacy, drunkenness."I had to get rid of that pseudo person. I had to return to my early beginnings." She never travels. But she is possessed, she says, of second sight, especially when it comes to the North, "I'm afraid to believe in reincarnation. Oh no, I've had enough." She talks of the catastrophes of her life baldly, but not with self-pity.

There are ten unpublished novels "they didn't pass Tom's eye" - and five more ready in her study. "I never have difficulty thinking up ideas. I have too many. They tumble over each other.'

Paolo Bocelli and Tania Rocchetta as the Macbeths

Theatre Stab in the back

Macbeth Riverside

The Compagnia del Collettivo from Parma arrives at the London International Festival of Theatre (LIFT '83) with a great deal of hype for a two-"Shakespeare season": first Hamlet, now this Macheth, then Henry IV from next Thursday.

They use as much or as little of the text (in Italian) as they nced to get to the heart of the play and present it in whatever mixture of modern styles seems apt. The Macbeths, for instance, get through their absurd little story on a film set, bowed and scraped to by technician-supers ncessantly sniffing their armpits or doing up their flies.

How interesting is it as a theatrical spectacle? Sometimes pretty good. How much does it have to say about Shakespeare's Macheth (which is not the point anyhow)? Not a lot. How much does it say about anything else in the world around us, "the universal truths inherent in great literature"? Not enough, If only subconsciously, so much of the motivation seems to have been simply to cock a snook at an irritatingly towering literary landmark, when in this country that would not be necessary before - and would only get in the way of - the business of ripping apart and fruitfully reconstructing an old play containing something of value.

The evening opens with a faintly bored reading of the play's synopsis in which the Witches salute Macbeth thrice merely from inability to get it right first time. A beaked figure doubling sole Witch and Porter grects Banquo, initial loser in the prophecy stakes, with a loud raspberry but offers Macbeth a cigarette. The dagger speech is mocked with actorish delivery and loads of light.

Along with all this goes an interesting portrayal of the Macbeths themselves as young parvenus lounging in front of a trendy little portable telly with a pile of paperbacks. Duncan's death is discussed rather as an executive and his wife might debate his prospects for promotion or a rise. Television drones on throughout the murder but the discovery of the corpse is breathtakingly staged, with subdued hubbub of horror glimpsed in flashes of white light. Then the media move in to interview key figures, yelling to Malcolm to weep (he refuses). Lady Macbeth dies in Pirandellian style by throwing off her costume and marching off the set in ordinary clothes. Mac-beth, with the house lights on, declares "Life's but a walking shadow. Life is cinema. A tale told by an idiot ... The cheap chair earlier demolished as a symbol of Macbeth's fall is taped together for Malcolm's coronation but will not take his weight without collapsing. # Rostropovich Festival Buoyant showman The first Rostropovich Festival has happened at Snape; and with it, at its heart on Saturday night, the apotheosis of the inevitble Slava-and-friends inevitble Slava-and-friends concept in a programme of "Paintings and Music". There they all were: Prokofiev. Akhmatova, Shostakovich, Tsvetayeva. Stravinsky - for the eye in the canvases of a fellow expatriot. Gabriel Glikman, staring in the raw, sculpted distillation of character, and for the ear in the musical tributes of Rostropovich and his wife, all curves, fullness and substan-

The pictures, well hung in the unvielding proportions of the Maltings recital room, were spirited via slide and screen into the concert hall, where to the accompaniment of Rostro povich's buoyant verbal show manship they spoke their own silent subtext. in Glikman' own work (think of Chagall Kandinsky, the cubist Picasso) there is a volatile movement between dartings of colour and laconic wit and blocks of numb stasis drained of colour - and so it was in the recital.

There was Stravinsky, bony triangular, sitting like a blue Gandhi ("when he smiled he was like an evil old lady"), with the droll scepticisms of his 1937 "Russian Song" played with nicely mocking restraint by Rostropovich and Roger Vig-noles. There were, on the other hand, the blue hope-drained eyes of Shostakovich: all angles of dry white lines biting on coarse canvas or hardboard "his life was angular, chased from one corner to another"); and there was his "Tears for a Dead Child", its question and answer Jewish folksong shared between Jane Mackenzie's dramatic and ever more vibrant soprano and Marcia Swanston's distinctive smoky mezzo.

Marina Tsvetayeva remembered by Galina Vishnevskaya in a spare, word-par ing performance of Shostakovich's "Hamlet's Dialogue with his Conscience", while portraits of Alexander Blok and Anna Akhmatova, both pierced by the red bayonet of revolution, had their counterparts in Shostako-vich and Prokofiev settings.

Prokofiev alone remained with the eyes of a child: past the laconic wit, the biting repartee Glickman and Rostropovich saw the still blue eyes and full red lips of fairytale, and the C major wonder of the Adagio from Cinderella.

The dedicated modeller of fashion

I had always been fascinated by shops I enjoyed pottering with objects and arranging them into patterns. In Jerusalem as a child I loved going into the local corner-shop. Food was scarce, but the couple who owned the shop took pride in displaying their cheeses on marble slabs with net covers like umbrellas and little blue beads around the base. Rows of sausages hung from a pole and on the floor there were sacks full of grain, beautifully laid out. And now, in 1964. I suggested the idea of opening a shop to Fitz. He thought it was silly, as life would revolve around looking after it, but I was feeling more and more infatuated with the idea of having a place to show off the clothes we had been selling through our mail-order business. order business.

We had accumulated lots of rejects and garments that people had sent back to exchange. Without telling Fitz, I hauled them over from our basement warehouse in Motcomb Street to our flat and spent hours arranging them round the living room, hanging them on door frames, fireplaces and cupboards. The next day I telephoned friends and secretaries of fashion writers, announcing a sale.

I put the record player on as loud as I could, playing a Beatles LP. By one o'clock the flat was seething. Every person I had telephoned had told at least 10 others, who in turn had brought friends along. When I telephoned Fitz at his office to come and have look, I had £500 in a shoe box I was using as a till. Our jectroom had was using as a till. Our bedroom had been turned into a changing room. I even had trouble refusing to sell my cushions and casserole dishes. By the time Fitz arrived, the flat looked as if a bomb had hit it. He thought it was a fluke, but for days afterwards people would arrive wanting to know if the sale was still on.

During one of my junk-hunting sprees I spotted a marvellous dilapidated place on the corner of Abingdon Road in Kensington. It had been a chemist's shop and had been closed for quite a while, but there were lots of black and gold signs left and the windows were painted halfway up with scratched black paint with gold-leaf edges. The woodwork outside was covered in peeling blue-grey paint. I tell in love with it instantly.

I dragged Fitz down there and he loved it too. We found the landlord, who said he wouldn't take less than £20 a week for the premises. We took it on the spot.

The shop was miles away from anywhere, even from Kensington High Street, which in those days was a place where only old ladies shopped. We were both still working at our jobs. Fitz as an advertising account executive and me as a freelance fashion artist. but we redecorated the place at weekends. Fitz painted the walls navy blue. We bought a beautiful Dutch wardrobe for £40, took the doors off and made them into a cash desk. We made long curtains in a William Morris print. A friend lent us two bronze lamps with huge black shades. I refused to have the peeling exterior

We asked our manufacturer to make us dresses of one style, a smock with very narrow sleeves, in a range of fabrics. He agreed, as a favour, (Many years later, he revealed that he bad felt sorry for us.)

While our stock was being manufactured, we received 2,000 orders by post for a brown chalk-striped smock which had been featured in Woman's Mirror. Two hundred of them arrived, and Fitz decided to store them at the shop as the Motcomb Street basement was already bulging. We delivered the dresses to the shop late one Friday

The next morning. Fitz dropped me off at the shop and left to collect some more dresses from the manufacturer. It was 10 o'clock and the curtains were still drawn across the windows. I left the front door and went into the lavatory. When I came out the shop was packed with girls. In concentrated silence they were all trying on the brown chalk-striped smock. I turned the record player on. I only had the one Beatles LP. The louder the music played, the faster the girls moved and the more people appeared

A silent queue formed in front of the cash desk. Each girl had a two-guinea dress on her arm. Not one asked if there were any other styles or other sizes. Nobody knew the price; they just held their purses open. By 11 o'clock, I had sold every dress.

As soon as ! could get to the phone, I called Fitz and said: "Quick, grab any dress you can." The shop was still full of people waiting for a delivery. When he arrived, the car's hood was down and brown chalk-striped dresses were heaped up in a mountain behind him. Everyone left the shop and we sold in the street, from the car. We were still selling that brown chalk-striped dress in one size and one colour six months later. Fitz and I now had no other life than Biba. When the shop opened we had both given up our jobs. Every morning we would feel great anxiety. We were Abridged from From A to Biba by Barbara Hulanicki, published by Hutchinson on September 5, price £8.95.

When she founded the Biba boutique, Barbara Hulanicki became the wardrobe mistress of Swinging London. Born in Palestine and brought up in Brighton before training as a fashion artist, she provided the girls of the golden Sixties with an image which amounted to a cultural statement: stick-thin legs protruded from beneath the abbreviated hems of simple dresses striped in mustard and mulberry; wide eyes were ringed with girl was prancing around dressed only colours to match; floppy felt hats and skin was like marble and her features feather boas accessorized the fantasy. Biba even changed the nature of shopping itself, by promoting an informal mood which turned the Kensington premises into a Saturday rendezvous both for those who set the style and for those who followed it. In

never sure if our customers would their flats and bedsits they had no come back again.

One Tuesday morning the weather a feel of a thunderstorm coming. The shop was empty. By noon the shop was still empty. I was feeling really depressed - it had all been a flash in the pan, the bonanza was over. We dashed up the road to Kensington soul, not one old lady with a shopping basket on two little wheels.

We soon realized that the shopping public reacts identically to the weather and the political situation. When they are depressed, they all depressed at the same time. When the sun comes out they are all happy and go out shopping. When the sun is hot they go to the park to sunbathe and you've lost them. When it rains, if you're a little shop they don't come, if you are a big store they stay with you all day. But it was this neurosis that we found so exciting. For Fitz it was like fishing, and for me it was like hunting through junk shops: you never knew when you would catch

Our Saturdays were always spectacular, whatever the weather. If it was raining, the shop stank of wet wool and the floor would be awash. If it was sunny the groups of newly-found friends would congregate outside the shop. It became a meeting piace. Years later I had letters from people who met at Biba, spent their courtship in Biba on Saturdays, married, had babies and wrapped them in Biba purple nappies. Recently I heard a beautiful girl at the airport calling, "Biba, Biba, to a little girl of about six in a straw hat and smock. We had become a big part of many people's lives.

At 26 Fitz and I felt much older than the others, like Mum and Dad. We worried about the girls who worked in the shop, and their fast lives. Some could cope, but many fell by the wayside by the time they were 19. I don't think our girls were promiscuous; they picked and chose. If they fancied someone they went right out and got what they were after instead of weaving webs and hypocritical traps, as we had to in the 1950s. In or bras. Their bosoms and tummies mother waiting for them to see if they came home with a crumpled dress. In was awful. The sky was grey, there was the buoyant mid-1960s they all had jobs and they were not used to eating massive meals. They were the postwar babies who had been deprived of nourishing protein in childhood and grew up into beautiful skinny people. A designer's dream. It didn't take much High Street. It was empty, too. Not 2 for them to look outstanding. The simpler the better, the shorter the better. Their legs seemed to be neverending. Suddenly London was filled with long-legged girls and boys who became envied all over the world.

The girls and boys started to travel on new all-in cheap holidays, and to pick up continental elegance, too. There were masses of them and they all seemed to flock to Abingdon Road. With Cathy McGowan endorsing our clothes by wearing them nearly every week to present Ready Steady Go on TV, there was a sort of underground grapevine which was growing daily. As soon as there was a new style the tomtoms would beat out a message throughout the clubs and offices and the shop would be full again. Every girl could buy a new dress for her evening date. They might all turn up wearing the same uncomfortable Biba smock that itched and stopped them bending their arms, but it was uniform for an

Their matchstick legs were encased in pale tights and low-cut patent pumps. Miniskirts led to the adoption of tights. They seldom needed to wear roll-ons were so tiny there was no need for the heavy upholstery. The natural form was beginning to show.

I had got through the depressing bits of my life before by slipping into fantasy and dream. When I met Fitz he made my fantasies come true. Biba was like a fantasy. I didn't like the way I looked, but the classic Biba dolly had all the attributes I lacked. She was very pretty and young. She had an upturned nose, rosy cheeks, and a skinny body with long asparagus legs and tiny feet. She was square-shouldered and quite flat-chested. Her head was perched on a long, swanlike neck. Her face was a perfect oval, her lids were heavy with long spiky lashes. She looked sweet but was as hard as nails. She did what she liked on impulse and had no Mum to influence her judgment.

As time went by my Biba girl became more dreamy and untouchable. Her long straight hair turned into a halo of golden ringlets, her cheeks were hollowed by brown powder, and her lips stained with sepia lipstick. The thin line of her brows framed her sparkly blue eyes. Once she had formed into a person it was easy to think up dresses and all the other things that she might want to use. She was so young and fresh that all those Auntie colours that I had hated when I was young looked new on her. In the daylight the orchids, dusty blues, bilberries and mulberries looked quite in tune with her surroundings. Once she was inside Biba, the music thundered, the lighting was soft, and she became more mysterious.

All classes mingled under the shop's creaking roof. There was no social distinction. Their common denominator was youth and rebellion against the establishment. Young working pirls, the beat offspring of anstocratic families, stars and would-be stars all flocked to the shop. One night as we were closing a tiny blonde girl came in and began taking the clothes off the hatstands. Instead of trying them on behind the dangerously wobbly screens, she stripped off in the shop and proceeded to try on smocks and trouser suits. Fitz was told to stay in the back office as the tiny, uninhibited larger than life. It was Julie Christie, getting her wardrobe together for the film Darling.

It was almost a year before the name was painted over the door at Abingdon Road. I didn't like it. It was like branding something. The shop looked much better without a name. If people wanted to find us, they would.

(By the end of 1965, the business had outgrown the Abingdon Road shop. As Swinging London gathered momen-tum. Biba was moved to larger premises on Kensington Church Street.)

As opening day approached I was getting more and more nervous. Maybe nobody would follow us the extra 500 yards up the road. We orchestrated a moving party from Abingdon Road to Church Street and arranged a photocall for the press Our arranged a photocall for the press. Our girls wheeled rails full of dresses all the way up Abingdon Road and down Kensington High Street to the new shop, followed by photographers. A pantechnicon arrived in Church Street arrived and so did a million other guests and gatecrashers. Cathy and Cilla clambered on to the lorry and helped to unload the hatstands, and the photographers had a field day. Music was thumping in the shop and the wine rapidly disappeared. Everybody had a good time.

When the last guest left it was 6 o'clock in the evening. The floor was awash with spilled wine. We began to bring out the stock and fill the shelves with T-shirts for the official opening the following day. It was a long night. By morning my brain was still whirring but my body had gone to sleep, so we went and had a greasy breakfast at the neighbouring cafe. When we came back there was a queue outside the

My favourite moments were always just before a new shop was to open: the music would be turned on, the girls ready as if to go on stage, tension mounting and - bang - the doors would open and let in the first This time the shop was full of people within moments. They examined everything - we had branched out into many new areas with everything dyed to match in a large spectrum of muted colours. There were big-brimmed hats, doublebreasted wool coats, tights, gloves, bags, jumpers and shirts, dresses and underwear. Even the matching feather boas, which I had intended only to use as decoration, sold like hot cakes.

Our first Saturday in Church Street was astonishing. The shop was four times the size of Abingdon Road but as crowded as the little one had been. The pavement outside was milling with people, every window seat was occupied and I even saw our bank manager take a quick look inside. By the early afternoon the hatstands were bare but still more people came to look.

Two weeks after Church Street opened, in March 1966, a team of reporters from Time magazine arrived. The next day it was Stern and then Paris Match. In their usual unimpressed way, our girls and the customers continued to crowd the shop. America and Europe had discovered, or invented, Swinging London, Long before this the man in the street had taken exposed thighs as part of life, but all of a sudden there were wolf whistles and cries of "Ooh, look at that one". The more they exclaimed, the shorter the skirts became. Every week I thought that we surely couldn't shorten them any more, but magically there were a few odd inches to go.

It was through absolute ignorance that the mini reached the streets. The short skirt was on the way but it was only seen in showrooms. Courrèges had made a strong impact on the world with his space-age dresses. Mary Quant was the first British designer to show the mini but I still say that our manufacturer, dear old Theo Savva, was the man responsible for putting the mini on the high street. When the jersey allocated for a little suit arrived at his factory it was steaming hot from the finishers. As Fitz bombarded Theo with telephone calls for more and more stock for the opening of the shop, Theo cut the somewhat stretchy double jersey without "resting" it. Jersey that is not rested soon relaxes itself back to its proper width. It was not the uncut fabric that rested - it was the skirts! When I saw the delivery I nearly had a heart attack. The skirts were only 10 inches long. God, I thought, we'll go bust - we'll never be able to sell them. I couldn't sleep, but that little fluted skirt walked out on customers as fast as we could get it on to the stands. C Poundplace Ltd. 1983

Last month we created a new publishing house. Mills & Bang, to market a completely new form of novel: romantic military fiction, aimed to satisfy the fantasies of both men and women.

The response was remarkable - all titles were sold out within days of hitting the bookstalls, and Fomping into Passion appeared briefly on the Cross-Channel bett-rellar list best-seller list.

Quick as flash he had leapt from his horse, bundled her from hers and rolled them both into a safe position in the grass. "Who's trying to kill us?" she gasped, thrifling strangely to the touch of his uniformed arm.

"Nobody. It's an army firing range. They could kill anybody. By the way", he said, his mouth not six inches from her perfect ear. "I believe you know my best friend. Oscar Threadgold. Major," he added

THE TIMES MONDAY AUGUST 15 1983

sideways look at the British way of life

Not very long ago, when privilege and wealth were the prerogative of the upper classes, there were some people called Emsworth who had titles and butlers called Beach. They also owned a lot of the land over which they hunted, shot and fished. When they travelled they stayed in other Emsworths' houses or the best hotels. They were a jolly crowd and often asked all their friends and relations to come and play at weekends. Sadly the Emsworths were living on borrowed time. Even in the shires the social and economic structure was changing. Most of the poor got richer while the Emsworths found it increasingly difficult to make ends meet - so much so that they sometimes had to sell off a wing of a house, or a few hundred acres, or even charge people called Smith, who wanted to see how the Emsworths lived, a couple of shillings to come and look over

At the same time as all this was going on a lot of people were making a lot of money, more often than not out of selling for thousands of pounds the mews cottages in which the Emsworths' retainers had lived rent-free for years. Or from installing central heating systems or keeping books or shops. These people (called Goldfingers) believed in property and looked round for ways of making even more money. And all the while the Smiths (of whom there were infinitely more than there were Emsworths or Goldfingers) beavered away in their small corners and sometimes cast a wistful eye at the Emsworths and Goldfingers, who seemed to have all the fun and owned all the emblems of wealth - horses and boats and lakes and miles of river bank - and wished they could join in.

Then one day, by chance, Lord Emsworth and Mr Goldfinger and Mr Smith happened to meet and between them cooked up a brilliant wheeze. (It was Goldfinger's idea but Emsworth and Smith quickly saw the logic of it.) To Lord Emsworth, Goldfinger said: "You've got the land but no money, I've got the money and a good head for business - and you" (to Smith) "who haven't much of either could, if all your friends chipped in afford to buy a part of all the things you've dreamed of owning but could never afford.

And so the syndicate was born - a compromise, like most things in life, but one which gave all the members a slice of property and a slice of a dream. Thereafter syndicates and partnerships and consortia sprang up all over the place. Wherever there was a piece of property or a coveted object far too expensive for any one individual to buy, the syndicate bought. They purchased minor stately homes and turned them into country clubs or health farms, they bought yachts and racehorses, and sold shares to people who wanted to sail or swan around the Members' Enclosure; they even bought old masters and when they were not gathering dust in a vault, took it in turn to hang them in their various drawing rooms.

Lord Emsworth was happy because he was able to stay on in his estate and pay Fred the gamekeeper, and though he would have preferred not to have all the Smiths and Goldfingers wandering over his land and fishing his rivers, he was a realist and knew that this way at least there might be a bit left for his son. Smith was deliriously happy because his wife could afford a tan and told all her friends that she owned a racehorse (though in fact she had only one-twelfth Goldfinger was probably the happiest of all because, apart from the shares he owned in all the syndicates, he had made enough money to buy a ew horses and lakes and houses outright.

Puffing his pipe of an evening, Lord Emsworth mused over a book of proverbs. He found an old Spanish one which said something to the effect that "he who divides gets the worst share", which confirmed what he had known all along, that foreigners didn't know what they were talking Shooting's an expensive sport, like yacht-racing or polo, if you come in from outside. The best number of people to shoot with is about six, anything over eight is not really on, though you do sometimes find 10. In my father's day anything beyond that was referred to as a hotel shoot. # Doctor's public orders

HTV in the autumn. Called Consider Yourself, it films various celebrities doing what comes nat-urally and then hauls them in front of a doctor and psychologist to be given a serious talking-to.

Katic Boyle was so obviously a picture of gorgeous, glowing good health that she escaped censure. Roddy Llewellyn, though in good proceedings that he reached out for more cigarettes than his normal ration. Darts player Eric Bristow turned out to be the villain of the piece: overweight, under-exercised, much given to late nights, late meals and lavish boozing.

However, he was so obviously fit and happy that he got away with a peevish warning to change his wicked ways by the time he's 30. The moral of that seems to be that a reckless youth is healthier than a misspent middle age.

What surprised Terry Miller, the programme's producer, was the way the normally self confident celebrities floundered helplessly when caught out in their bad habits. I understand how they felt when exposed to close questioning of the medical kind since, being pale and peaky looking. I am always having to submit to this kind of inquisition. Why don't I wear a vest? Why do I spend Sunday afternoons on a sofa with a pile of novels and a mug of coffee instead of getting some roses n my cheeks?

Undeterred by my churlish ripostes, my husband even tenderly inquires every morning how I slept although by now he must have noticed that every night I fall into a snoring, ten hour stupor.

It's getting impossible for most of us to claim 101 per cent fitness in the light of so many diagnose-ityourself books flooding the market, all of them crammed with diagrams of parts of the body you never worried about before because you didn't know you were carrying them around with you. Ever since the reading public has worked itself through Our Bodies, Ourselves, it's fatal to ask "How do you do?" since you will probably be told. Someone's state of health is considered a suitable topic for conversation in a way the state of their bank balance or the state of their sex life is not. I feel sorry for David Steel, innocently turning up for a refreshing weekend at David Owen's country house and getting instead the doctor's bedside manner and advice on the lines of "why don't you take a good long rest . . don't think of coming back to politics for a while ... come back and see me again in 1997". Just the sort of thing to make him wonder whether he was likely to last

I shall be interested to see if the subjects of Consider Yourself do just what the television doctor ordered. Will Anne Nightingale give up smoking? Will Leslie Thomas lose some weight? Such riveting questions should not be left hanging in the airwaves and I certainly hope HTV is planning a second series, provisionally entitled Reconsider Yourself.

 There is a lot of serious wardrobe confusion about. Jeanne Turnock was sacked from her job at a crematorium for wearing trousers; MP Edwinz Currie's pink tracksuit got some pretty old-fashioned looks from the honourable members and barrister Anne Mallalieu's correct but dreary black working outfit was denied the "uniform" status that would have given her some tax

We could simplify matters by adopting, to the last working woman among us, the American dress-forsuccess business look, worn by female secretaries and company presidents alike and consisting of a sober suit with a tailored jacket worn over a crisp blouse in an unexciting colour. The streets of any American city are full of women identically if uninspiringly dressed and they never wake up in the morning yelling. What on earth am going to wear today?"

THE TIMES DIARY

Diary divide

There will be a fringe beyond the fringe at this year's Labour Party conference in Brighton. Party headquarters had refused to list in the conference diary meetings organized by groups which are not on the official register. That includes, of course, Militant, but also Socialists for Labour Victory. Briefing. Labour Campaign on Ireland, and the Labour Abortion Rights Campaign. Tribune received an invitation to list details of its meeting: Ken Livingstone's paper, Labour Herald, did not (though it may yet be admitted). Mandy Moore of Socialists for Labour Victory says her organization will aim to get an "alternative diary" with a comprehenisve list of the week's events into the hands of every delegate. "It is the diary which most delegates follow when deciding how to spend their evenings", she says, "so being excluded is quite important".

Nationalism, the threat to Nato

In proportion to their influence, too much attention is devoted to the minority who criticize Nato strategy from the left and too little to the attitudes of the general public and to those who criticize it from the centre or right - the "neo-Gaullists". This latter group, which includes a number of European politicians. some close to power, is more influential and therefore a far more insidious long-term threat to the Atlantic alliance than the small and obviously demoralized membership of CND, whose policies have been massively rejected at the polls. Mr John Nott, the former Defence Secretary, declared himself a Gaullist and supported the Trident programme as a hedge against Nato's collapse. Hedley Bull, Pro-fessor of International Relations at Oxford, has said that the US has subordinated European detente in the interests of its world struggle with the Soviet Union. He has called for the formation of a European alliance within Nato and the development of a European nuclear

Sir James Cable, former head of the Foreign Officer Planning Staff, has called Britain's dependence on the US an addictive drug and suggested that it may have contributed to our national decline. He has also called for Britain to follow the French lead in defence policy, to close the US bases here and to limit Britain's commitment to the alliance mainly to maritime forces. None of those quoted would like to see the precipitate collapse of Nato (and neither of course did de Gaule) but, by suggesting that the alliance may disappear or that we should weaken our commitment to it, they advocate policies which could set in train an irreversible movement towards such a collapse. This is particularly so because their criticism coincides with growing attacks on the alliance from many Americans who resent the discrep-ancy between the US and European defence budgets.

John Nott, echoing the line set by de Gaulle. Right, Senator Stevens, a trend to a new isolationism

When Nato was established in 1949 the US was the greatest economic power in history and it seemed reasonable to ask it to protect the impoverished Europeans. By agreeing to this request Washington overturned all the foreign policy traditions which the US had built up since independence. But today the Europeans are not impoverished; wages in Copenhagen or Hamburg are now generally as good as those in Detroit or Dallas. Yet in 1981 the Americans spent $782 per head on defence while the Danes spent $280.

It is not surprising, therefore, that the traditional US hostility towards involvement in Europe has shown signs of revival, and that the Republican whip in the Senate, Senator Ted Stevens, and others have sought to reduce the US forces stationed in Europe.

Is the time then ripe for a mutually agreed divorce? In July 1969 The Times declared, "at present 250 million people of Western Europe rely on 200 million Americans to defend them from 200 million and the state of million Russians although the Russians have 700 million angry Chinese at their backs. This proposition has only to be stated for it to be seen to be unreasonable". Since then that proposition has been put with increasing frequency and force. On the other hand, if 350,000 American servicemen stain a crisis, have failed to reassure the West Europeans or to convince European military strategists that a Russian attack could be defeated without the use of nuclear weapons, how could Europe defend itself?

Without US support for the Europeans the Warsaw Pact would have a comfortable three to one advantage over the West in the main elements of conventional military power, tanks and aircraft. Soviet submarines would dominate the oceans and the Soviet nuclear preponderance would be absolute. There is no prospect that the West European governments would undertake the huge defence spending needed to rectify so great an imbalance. Nor is it desirable that they should make economic and social sacrifices on such a scale.

If Nato were to collapse, the most probable immediate outcome is that Western Europe would dissolve into a confused medley of states, some trying to defend themselves, some hoping that their very weakness would save them from the effects of conflict elsewhere, others seeking an accommodation with Moscow.

It would be optimistic to assume that the Europeans would cooperate to defend themselves. But were they to do so their defences would still be much less effective than at present, and if they tried to make them effective they would be vastly more tioned in Western Europe, and the expensive. Alliances have incomparably the most successful arms control measures evolved since

The only advantage which the Europeans might acquire from the break-up of Nato would be a slight reduction in the risks of becoming involved in a war which began somewhere else in the world. But this cannot be taken for granted: in most cases Europe's strategic interests in the Third World coincide with those of the US, while, if the US and Soviet Union were to go to war, it is inconceivable that a strategically vital area such as Europe would be left unscathed.

. If Nato did collapse we should most certainly try to fashion an adequate West European defence. But we should be aware of the magnitude of the problems involved. West Europeans can still do much, if they so choose, to strengthen the cohesion and military effectiveness of the alliance by increasing their share of the defence burden to a more equitable level and thereby working out a mutually acceptable relationship with the US.

But if the alliance did disintegrate, through a combination of insurmountable tensions and flawed perceptions of interest, no alternative strategy - whether in the form of neutralism or of military cooperation among the Europeans - could ensure the long-term security of Europe as effectively as the alliance has done in the past. It is above all in the period of uncertainty and confusion which would follow the collapse of Nato that each state would be most vuinerable to Soviet threats and blandishments and the dangers of war would be most them to be looked after, but they have a largely unfounded dread of anyone putting them to any other use. Even attempts to turn old burial grounds into gardens, the one use readily sanctioned by the law, can become contentious.

Both Highgate and Nunhead offer a fine example of a further paradox in a topic riddled with paradoxes. Both were established, in 1839 and 1840 respectively, by the London Cemetery Company; with 37 and 52 acres apiece, they were part of the hygienic (and profitable) movement of the times to remove death from the "choked charnel houses" of the City churchyards and install it more commodiously in spacious suburban grounds. Yet a hundred-odd years later, history has come around in a circle: Highgate, Nunhead, Tower Hamlets and the like have, in turn, become choked with the dead and with their dilapidated funerary furniture, and once again words such as "decay", "disease" and "desecration" are invoked in a plea that someone should do something about the situation. A wild earden is all very well, but a vandalized jungle defeats every purpose. Most of the once-profitable companies are extinct or in liquidation, their one People don't much want to look capital asset transformed into a after their local cemeteries or pay for remarkable but appalling white be financially responsible.

The very cult of death which originally paid such dividends has exacerbated the problem of the dead. For centuries, most people were buried simply in woollen shrouds, and wooden crosses were the norm: returning to dust meant just that because, within a hundred years, both visible and invisible relics obligingly rotted away. The universal use of the coffin and the general introduction of stone memorials in the eighteenth century changed all that - and indeed subverted the whole purpose of consigning a body to the earth. The private family grave, pur-chased "in perpetuity" and marked by a substantial edifice, is a logical absurdity, a vain assertion of the social and economic values of this life and their power to transcend even mortality. Thus the final paradox is that these old cemeteries have no value as an evocation of loved individuals they evoke, rather, the knockabout drama of turnip-bogeys and ghouls -but they are valuable as a social record and as a repository of sculpture. Highgate's horse, lion and recumbent dog are well known - and may be viewed again, in photo-graphs, at the exhibition, at the elephant for which no one wants to Museum of London - but almost all the big London cometeries and many of the provincial ones have a line in weeping angels; be-willowed urns and eccentric canopies. Quis custodiet? The sums of money once paid by the grave owners to have them looked after have been rendered derisory by time, inflation and the inroads of nature: and in any case, these works of art, in their now-wild setting, are not private property but a public legacy. William Morris's dictum, originally applied to buildings seems apposite to cemeteries also:

These . . . do not belong to us only . They belonged to our forefathers and will belong to our descendants unless we play them false . . . We are only trustees for those who will come after us." Yes, but who are to be the trustees? Local authorities, understandably, are either unwilling or inefficent in assuming the burden of the upkeep of what is not just a local institution: bodies of local people may be dedicated but lack both real power and funds. This month an appeal for Highgate is being launched - but the real need is campaign for a national body comparable with the National Trust to assume overall control for what is, after all, a national asset,

Why the sugar isle is in such a stir

Port Louis, Mauritius As the campaign for the Mauritian general election on Sunday enters the final lap, most of the smart political money in this Indian Ocean sugar island is on the Mouvement Militant Mauricien (MMM) of the 38-year-old Paul Bérenger, a mem-ber of the white Franco-Mauritian minority, to win by a short head. But the wisest punters are hedging their bets. For, as the wily former agriculture minister, Sir Satcam

It is only 14 months since Mauritius, 720 square miles of coralfringed volcanic rock inhabited by a racially mixed population of more than 990,000, last went to the polls and swept the left-wing MMM into power in alliance with the smaller Parti Socialiste Mauricien (PSM). The alliance won all 62 directly elected seats.

Boolell, puts it, "today's enemy can

The octogenarian Sir Seewoosagur Ramgoolam, the Hindu doctor who had led Mauritius for 14 years since independence from Britain, and had dominated the local political scene for a decade before that, failed to gain a scat.

The victorious alliance had not been in power for more than a few weeks, however, before its leaders were squabbling among themselves. It survived a political crisis last October and limped on until March 22 when Mr Bérenger, the Finance Minister, resigned with 10 cabinet will take off in a big way PHS colleagues. claiming he was not getting full support for the unpopular measures needed to straighten out the country's parlous finances.

The Prime Minister, Anerood Jugnauth, a 53-year-old Hindu who rained as a lawyer in Britain and had been president of the MMM since 1973, parted company with Mr Bérenger, the MMM's founder, and formed a new party, the Mouvement Socialiste Militant (MSM), but he did not have a clear majority and was forced to call an election.

The MSM consists of Mr Jugnauth and some other Indian defectors from the MMM, plus virtually the whole of the PSM, whose youthful leader, Harish Boodhoo, represents a populist Hindu conservatism that has developed distinctly communalist and anti-white overtones. Mr Jugnauth and Mr Boodhoo accuse Mr Berenger of being power-hungry and of betraying the "socialist" cause for which they fought together last year.

This however, has not stopped the MSM from forming an alliance with the discredited Labour Party of Sir Seewoosagur.

Mr Berenger has his own credipility gap. He was largely responsible for the strong emphasis in last year's MMM-PSM manifesto on redistributing wealth, raising living standards and improving welfare services. But it was he, as Finance Minister, who had to announce to the public the postponement of most of these programmes because of the economic stringencies required by the World Bank and the International reduced the controversial export duty on sugar. The sugar industry, which furnishes more than threequarters of Mauritian foreign exchange earnings, is in real financial difficulty, but it is also controlled by the grands blancs, the white Franco-Mauritian minority. Mr Bérenger thus laid himself open to the thinly veiled racial taunt of being a lackey of (white) big business.

Certainly, it is paradoxical that Mr Berenger, the radical firebrand who learnt his politics on the student barricades in Paris in 1968, built his political career in Mauritius on trade union organization, and was even imprisoned for a year in the early 1970s, is now privately the preferred candidate of many conservative Mauritian businessmen. Mauritius's foreign creditors also see him as the man best equipped to get the economy back on the rails.

The history of Mauritius is as surprising as its politics. Uninhabited for most of recorded history, it was colonized sporadically by the Dutch in the seventeenth century and settled permanently in 1721 by the French, who imprinted their culture and language on the island established the sugar industry and introduced African slaves. Their mixed blood descendants now form the Creole population and their pidgin French dialect is the nearest

Even the ludicrously protracted leadership election has brought its benefits. The four candidates unable to keep silent during the four-mouth campaign, have issued manifestos, written articles, delivered speeches, taken part in debates. As well as making ritual speeches about aspects of policy, they have felt obliged again and again to return to discussing the state of the party. That some of their conclusions seem to me to be mistaken is not the point. In thinking hard about the party's little more than nine months will principles its role its disagreeable come the local elections, and shortly principles, its role, its disagreeable recent past and its discouraging potential for the future, they have enabled - perhaps forced - the membership to participate in that thinking process too.

The leadership election process itself has been inevitably subjected to reappraisal, little of it favourable. The party of the people - as it still thinks of itself - has been compelled unhappily to accept that for the first time in 80 years anyone seeking its highest offices has to have money.

Again, the internal democracy of the trade unions has become a subject of debate, in a manner not agreeable to many leading the unions but extremely salutary for the prospects of genuine democracy within those unions. Decisions to favour one candidate or another, if made by an executive council or a delegate conference, have been consultation of members, embarked upon with whatever good intentions, has often been cumbersome, incompetent or faulty. It is clear that, even if the electoral college survives in its present form, it will be difficult to repeat these elephantine procedures in future contests. If this election convinces unions that they will have to put their own house in order, such of the glib arguments that Norman Tebbit has used in seeking to vindicate his recently published anti-trade union proposals. Labour activists know that the simply because events, instead of allowing such a drift, will provide an almost non-stop series of tests by which Labour's efforts at recovery will be gauged. By elections will come along and Pearith, providing Labour with yet another lost deposit has demonstrated that unless the apparently remorseless electoral trend is reversed, each by election could be a further milestone along the road of the party's decline. In after them the elections to the European Assembly, in which Labour could have difficulty in defending even its present poor representation.

Labour on June 9 was sustained. insofar as it was sustained at all, by the residual loyalty of 28 per cent of the electorate. Many of those voters were giving a final chance to the party of their parents and grand-parents. Each of those previous supporters, as well as the allegiance of new voters, will have to be won anew every time the politing booths open. Labour cannot afford to take a ingle elector for granted any longer. The next hundle will come at the party conference, now less than seven weeks away. Even if that hurdle is surmounted, there will still be more ahead capable of sending the party sprawling. If Labour fails at the first hurdle, many spectators may have lost interest by the time the next is reached.

Palmy days for the council counsel

It is sometimes said that the group of people that benefited most from the French Revolution were lawyers. Those who kept their heads, that is. And it seems that the same thing is happening in London in these revolutionary times.

I am astonished that the Bar Council has not mounted a cam-paign to save the GLC. I had expected, by now, petitions and probing questions in Parliament. Or at the very least a letter to The Times signed by 20 eminent heads of chambers.

But perhaps it is happening after ali - in an appropriately discreet manner, words in the ear of ministers at the Reform Club. That must be it.

The truth is that the Bar has done remendously well out of the GLC in the last two years - as it has out of all the new left-wing councils. Since the traumatic shock of the Law Lords' decision on London Transport fares in late 1981, the evolving attitude of the left towards the law has been fascinating to watch. Tempted at first to rail at the whole legal system as merely an arm of capitalist oppression, and the judges as pawns of a Tory government, then to include in futile confrontationist tactics (the "Can't Pay, Won't Pay" campaign), they quickly came to realize that the law was an exciting game at which two could play. And it is fair to say that the Conservative forces that challenged the legitimacy of the fare reductions in the first place (Bromley Council e al) have only themselves to blame for this development.

in any case the GLC Labour leaders found lawyers who told them that the Law Lords' judgment did not after all mean what it said, and they could decrease fares. They found lawyers who told them they did not have to carry out the Ministry of Defence's civil defence exercises. When they had one legal opinion suggesting they would be at risk of personal surcharge if they did not put up the price of school meals, they had little difficulty in finding another to say they could perfectly legitimately keep it where it was. They have even (and here's an irony for the party of trade unionism) got legal advice on how to act unilaterally in imposing de-cisions on their own staff associ-

The law on local authority powers and discretion is based on the anachronistic assumption that thereis a consensus among all thinking men and women about what is reasonable". It reads, inter alia: "Unreasonable". is a general description of what must not be done"...

What happy days of noblesie oblige when everybody in power could agree on what was done and not done. And indeed it lasted a surprisingly long time. During the nine years I have been in local government, the first seven were spent in the innocent belief that I was elected to take decisions on the basis of my own judgment, and I never thought of taking legal advice. What thin years these must have been for the local government bar.

All that is changed. With consensus gone, with challenges to the status quo mounting in volume and bitterness from all sides, we do not feel safe even to open our mouths, let alone raise our hands to vote, without a counsel's opinion - and usually two or three.

But of course, since the law depends on a definition of the most subjective of terms (not only reasonable" but "proper" "relevant"), it is not too difficult to find lawyers to suit political taste. Barristers are people too, after all, and the range of their political beliefs stretches from the crusted old reactionaries on the right whose view of civic responsibilities goes back to the poor law and the workhouse, to those trendy left transvestites of the Temple (wig and gown and m'learned friend by day, denims and CND badge and comrade by night) whose vision is of the new collectivist dawn. (For some of the latter the growth in local government work has brought not only liberality but liberation: they have been enabled to "come out". and are now sometimes seen around County Hall wearing their evening rig in daylight.) One of the ironies of the present situation is that it seems to be proving a favourite maxim of the Prime Minister: that private enterprise always performs better than the state. The freelance barristers we employ always seem to outwit the parliamentary draftsmen. Indeed, maybe the Bar will do even better out of the Government's forth-coming direct assault on local government than it has done out of the present cold war. Just as the tax lawyers always find ways of keeping their clients' money out of the clutches of the Inland Revenue, so these new magicians of the local government Bar will find loopholes through which to preserve local government's powers.

As an old friend of mine who is both a barrister and a former distinguished leader of a local authority always used to say when contemplating some new and par-ticularly assume piece of legislation: Well, it all makes work for the working man to do !" And so it will no doubt. With thousands on the

THE TURKISH QUESTION

Can Turkey still stay as a H'estern ally when she returns to democracy again? Can she believe her allies when they agreed with 'Evrenism" in her most critical. days? Can Turkey rely on these countries again?

Those questions are asked in a document which, as reported in The Times last week, emanates from the sixteen Turkish political leaders of right and left who have been interned since June 2 in the disused radar station at Zincirbozan, near Canakkale on the Dardanelles. The authors of the document may not have intended it for publication, or at least may not have wished to be publicly associated with it. But there is no doubt that it does accurately reflect their views, and that they wished these views to be known in opinion-forming and policy-making circles in Europe and the United States.

The questions are in any case ones which such circles should be asking themselves with increasing discomfort. Up to now the prevailing tendency in the West has been to give General Evren and his regime the benefit. of the doubt. They did, after all, put an end to the terrorism that was claiming twenty lives a day when they took over in September 1980, and to the parliamentary stalemate which had paralysed Turkey's political system. They allowed Mr Turgut Ozal, the monetarist guru of the incumbent government, to carry on his work of stabilising Turkey's finances and restoring her foreign credit.

Periodic military interventions to put the country back on course are hardly unprecedented in Turkey. There was one in 1969, another in 1971, both of which were followed by a fairly swift resumption of the democratic process. The generals of 1980 promised to do the same again, only to make a more thorough job of it this time.

That, to the political establishment both in Turkey itself and in the West, is what they appeared at first sight to be doing. True, in the process they arrested very large numbers of people, and there was a growing body of evidence that many of those people were tortured during interrogation. But the scale of terrorism to be dealt with seemed to justify a large number of arrests, and - unhappily - torture had been by no means unknown in Turkey even under civilian government.

True, the limitations on freedom of expression seemed rather draconian, but they were widely assumed to be only a temporary aspect of martial law. True, the constitution promulgated last year seemed rather heavily weighted in favour of the executive power and against the freedom of the individual, but that was perhaps a necessary prophylactic against the excesses of the 1970s. True, the referendum held to ratify it was hardly a free and for choice, but rather than quibble about that it was surely better to accept the result and get back to civilian rule?

Sustained by such arguments, politicians and media alike, in the West, have more or less consciously applied a lower standard to the regime's performance on human and civil rights than they would to any other European country, west or east. The long drawn out trial of twenty-seven intellectuals, including a retired ambassador (brought to court shaven-headed, refused permission to go abroad for cancer treatment, and now facing a probable ten-year prison sentence) for the heinous crime of forming a "peace association", has generally received downpage treatment. The American government seems unperturbed by the fact that the correspondent of United Press International was beaten up when he applied for a passport and has still not been given one five months later, in spite of written assurance to the contrary from the Turkish ambassador in Washington. One can imagine the reaction if a Polish journalist working for an American news agency were to be similarly treated

Why? Because Turkey, unlike Poland, is part of the West.

Because martial law had been introduced there to save democracy, not to stamp it out. Or so we thought, and so - it is fair to say - many mainstream Turkish politicians thought until this year. But such a view is becoming less tenable.

The purge of universities this spring directed not merely against Marxists but against even the most mildly left-leaning liberals, was hardly the act of a regime intending to restore democracy in any meaningful sense. Even so, the authorisation of political parties in April, in preparation for the elections due in November, seemed to offer a chance for free debate to resume.

The real moment of truth came on May 31, when the regime banned the first of the new parties that seemed likely to win substantial popular support and ordered the detention of Mr Süleyman Demirel, the oftreelected conservative prime minister of the past two decades. along with thirteen other former politicians and two of the new party's would-be founders. Since then it has vetoed personalities to prevent other potentially popular parties, of both left and right, from reaching the quota of thirty founding members which it has itself fixed. The deadline for formation of parties is now fast approaching and it is clear that only those whose leaders have been hand-picked by the generals will be allowed to qualify. Even they will have to submit their lists of candidates to a forther veto.

Democracy means allowing the people to make their own choices - which, it now appears is precisely what Turkey's gen erals are unwilling to do. In these circumstances it will be difficult for the rest of the world to accept the government that emerges from the elections (if they are held) as genuinely representative and protest most strongly against, of the Turkish people. It looks as the sentence of 14 months' though what is planned is not, imprisonment followed by three though what is planned is not, after all the restoration of democracy but the legitimation of continued military rule.

Implications of green belt guidance

Chipping Barnet (Conservative) Sir, Your leader on green belt policy (August 8) puts the recent Government draft circular in its proper and wider context. As you rightly judge, the circular has caused consternation to at least one MP representing part of an outer London borough containing a substantial wedge of green beit.

The draft circular is vague if not contradictory. If the final circular issued is not materially altered it will, I fear, cause totally different interpretations to be put upon it by the public, local planning authorities and potential developers. For example, paragraph 11 of the draft circular states: ... the Government continue to attach great importance to the use of green belts to contain the sprawl of built-up areas and to safeguard the neighbouring countryside from en-croachment . . " This is a fair croachment ... "This is a fair summary of the definition and purpose of green belts. Yet two paragraphs later the assertion is made that "... If green belts are drawn excessively tightly around existing built-up areas it may not be possible to maintain the degree of permanence that (they) should have..."

Surely, if the policy is to be effective, their boundaries should be drawn tightly around built-up areas on the fringes of the metropolitan

(and other) green belts? As I interpret the draft circular, the danger is that it will encourage owners and agents to apply for planning permission on any suitable site fit for development and make it more difficult for authorities to resist. It is relevant to add here that interested third parties cannot appeal against any planning permission granted. It may be that there are certain sites in designated or interim green belts which are detached from the principal open space rings, surrounded by built-up areas and unused and unsightly. Such sites might be better developed for housing, but they must be relatively few and far between.

I suggest local councils should identify such sites and invite public comment on them before releasing them, if appropriate, for develop-ment. Otherwise, the final circular

Dissident's sentence

From Mr Sydney Chapman, MP for should be confined to stressing the success of green belts over the past four decades and the continuing need for authorities to be vigilant in protecting them from encroaching spburbia.

This is particularly necessary at a time when thousands of acres of land in the metropolis and other commbations lie unused, under-used derelict; and especially when London's first orbital motorway will be completed in three years with the consequent pressure for development all around it intensified. Yours faithfully.

SYDNEY CHAPMAN, House of Commons.

From Mr R. W. G. Smith Sir, One peg of the latest demand by the housebuilders for the release of green belt land for housing is that land of "little amenity value", for example run-down sites, should be freed for building.

Parts of London's green belt are undoubtedly of much less scenic value than others, but that does not mean that they should be released for housing. The green belt is there to prevent expansion of towns and the swallowing up of countryside by building, and the scenic quality of the land is irrelevant.

It suits the development interests to pretend that the less attractive land might as well be built upon, but that misrepresentation of the nature of the green belt ought not to go unchallenged. The tragedy is that the Secretary of State for the Environment and some newspapers look like falling for the trick.

People living near run-down green belt sites attach great importance to them if it is all that they have to prevent the spread of the Great Wen. To sacrifice green belt to mollify (temporarily) the vociferous and greedy building industry would be extremely short-sighted and a tragedy for future generations.

Unsightly sites can be rendered attractive and useful without surrendering them to builders. Surely it is not beyond our incensity to do that. and to meet any genuine housing Yours faithfully,

R. W. G. SMITH, Chairman, The London Green Belt Council. 11! Billy Lows Lane, Potters Bar, Hertfordshire, subjected to constant harassment and police surveillance, and his wife

Sir. We at the Theatre Royal, Haymarket, take great exception to Sir Roy Strong's article of July 30. His reference to "that most elegant but now sadly run-down theatre' completely misrepresents how the theatre looks and the public sees it. Is he aware of the political and economic gulf which exists between the subsidised and unsubsidised sectors of theatre?

In April, 1980, the licence fee imposed on the Haymarket by the GLC rose from £75 to £1,350 (this applied to all theatres). Since that date the licence fee has increased annually to £1.866. The fee, being based on seating capacity, means that some theatres of larger capacity instead of paying £75 as hitherto, are now paying £4,368; however, subsicompanies as registered charities pay only a nominal fee of £30. Additionally, whereas the rates paid by this theatre and others are in the five-figure category, those in the subsidised area are considerably less, as also are their rents. The Haymarket is a class I listed building and, in company with all other occupiers of listed buildings, has as a result its cross to bear with its additional burdensome expenses.

Although we are unable to predict what may happen in the future (it may well be the title, "Curtains for our theatre heritage", is applicable), we look to it with more realism and enthusiasm than does Sir Roy. Rather than complain one should be more positive in helping theatre. We in the theatre pursue with lireless vigour all avenues in an effort to improve its lot. Alas, in the corridors of power little attention is, at this moment, being paid to our pleas by those who could alleviate our position. People running theatres are dedicated and skilled professionals doing a difficult job very well indeed and it is support they require, not criticism. Finally, in reviewing A Patriot For

Me with Mr Alan Bates, which opened here on August 8 to an extremely high level of advance bookings, Mr Jack Tinker referred to the Havmarket as "this palace of establishment theatre". This group has four of the most beautiful theatres in England, the Theatre Royal, Haymarket, the Strand, the Theatre Royal, Brighton and Richmond Theatre and categorically none of them are "sadly run down"

Alternative routes in quest for health

From Dr Richard D. Tonkin Sir, Ruth West and Brian Inglis are right in the main substance of their arguments (August 8,9,10) for increased recognition of various different therapeutic techniques in the management of health and recovery from illness. But surely the greatest benefit to the greatest number of people lies in co-oneration between conventional and what is more accurately termed complementary medicine.

To foster the false concept of orthodox scientific medicine as outdated and hazardous is highly dangerous. Scientific and complementary practices both have an important part to play in the health care of the public.

We agree that many of today's patients suffer from an imbalance of body function (disturbed homeostasis) which is closely related to personal and environmental factors. We also agree that many comp-lementary therapies are eminently suitable for dealing with such dis ease.

However, orthodox medicine still carries the responsibility for screening out a large number of organic conditions for which some direct action is more appropriate and without which serious complications and/or long term disability may

Finally, we must not lose sight of the fact that around half of all cases of cancer can now be successfully eliminated as a result of intensive research and the use of new technology and although the patient's own self healing capability is unquestionably of primary importance, it needs all the help it can get from these recent scientific discoveries. Sincerely yours,

RICHARD D. TONKIN, Chairman, Research Council for Complementary Medicine. Bedford Square, WC1.

From Mr R. G. Williams

Sir, The editorial, "Physician, heal thyself" (August 10) is a good example of scientism - that is to say the dressing up of a subject in the terms of science but containing very little of the actual content of science. In this particular sample the scientistic approach has taken the form of the rejection of scientific method with a simultaneous appeal to science in the form of "the world of pure science".

The confused thought is instanced by the phrase "... and prefer to believe that all physical states can be examined and explained objectively". A physical state obviously can be measured or examined, since that is the defining quality of a physical state. Equally, a physical state can be explained objectively.

Labour leadership

From Mr Jeff Rooker, MP Birmingham, Perry Bar (Labour)

Sir, Alan Sapper ("More like a nightmare ticket" - feature, August 11) presumes too much. How does he know that the Labour Party annual conference will vote year in year out the same way on each and every policy issue - for that is the only basis that he can write as he does about a Labour leadership team "in line" and "in tune" with annual conference.

He glosses over in his last sentence the key point that the new leader will not be able to "carry out" any policies until he becomes Prime Minister, This is not an unimportant Doint.

He cites "a recent opinion poll" (unnamed) which gave a majority for increased taxation to be spent on improving social services as evidence that our policies were not understood. However, the 1979 British Election Study showed how fragile the support is on this point.

Seventy-one per cent were in favour of the statement that government services such health, education and welfare should be kept up even if it means that taxes cannot be reduced"; whereas 71 per cent also agreed that "social services and benefits should be cut back". The divisive contest of 1981 and its aftermath made it impossible to begin the task of selling a policy which would be believed on this one issue he cites.

There is not a shred of evidence that either Roy Hattersley or Neil Kinnock wish to be surrounded by yes men"; indeed the opposite is the case. Leading the Labour Party to victory in the next general election is a somewhat different task than running a trade union. It's about time trade union leaders woke up to this.

But it is an uphill struggle; the evidence of nationalist discontent persists. In 1977 Vladimir Zhvaniya was sentenced to death for bomb attacks on public buildings. It is difficult to be neutral about Drumnadrochit, to snatch data, not seem tragic if the beast's the Loch Ness Monster. Like the virtues and attributes of Mrs Margaret Thatcher, Mr Tony Benn or Miss Koo Stark, people of all sorts and conditions tend to express firmish views on the subject. In at least one household the beast is lumped with the Abominable Snowman and God by inquisitive children as a test of their parents's propensity for faith. It can be difficult explaining to a four-year-old that the Almighty is in a rather different league from the other two.

Of the three, despite the efforts of the World Council of Churches in Vancouver, the Monster attracted the most headlines last week. Loch Ness. it seems, is humming with electronic gadgetry as himters sighting by Mrs Mackay of of curiosity had abated, would it all, may their success be partial.

At the same time the inexorable historical pressure for some sort of relationship inevitably puts the issue back on the agenda every time it has been knocked off. And in the last decade it has ceased to be respectable to discuss church unity as if the Roman Catholic Church did not exist.

It does exist, and is very big. Any reasonable basis of affili-ation between the World Council of Churches and the Roman Catholic Church would swamp the world council with Roman Catholics. fundamentally

> The fundamental difficulty, however, concerns authority. In the Protestant and Anglican worlds, loose national and international federations function successfully perhaps because not much is expected of them. The further removed they are from the local congregation, the less they matter to that local congregation.

> No one ever stopped an argument in a Parochial Church Council simply by quoting a document from the World Council of Churches, the British Council of Churches, or the Lambeth Conference. Even sophisticated and critical Roman Catholics, on the other hand, treat official Roman Catholic documents with respect. They may not be infallible, but they are not to be trifled with, it is assumed.

Authority is not just the stumbling block to closer relations at the structural level, side which raises it, but the issue is not any longer seen on the other side, as it once was, as merely a Roman neurosis. The authority question has found its way into the internal agendas of the other churches, for it is closely related to the question of the deviopment of doctrine and the preservation of tradition. In the Church of England both the ordination of women and unity with the Free Churches reached stalement because of unresolved differences about the authority of the church. Without better agreement on this doctrine, the Church of England has found itself incapable of deciding what evolutions of its faith and order are legitimate, and how they are to be sanctioned.

On the non-Roman Catholic side, the tendency has been to assume that authority does indeed exist, and belong to something loosely called "the Church". So long as anthority's only function was to underline

On the Roman side, the opposite tendency has been to locate authority very precisely in the Holy See, the divine instrument of an authority given to "the Church," in this case the Roman Catholic Church, at its foundation.

Both views are changing quite rapidly, though neither position has been completely ahandoned. The only convergence possible, which does infact seem to be gradually emerging, would come from adding the two approaches together, and letting them shape each other until they are compatible. . . .

The result would not be som solution to the vexed question of Roman Catholic relations with councils of churches, but church unity itself in a Church with an authority the world is looking for.

They will face stiff compe tition for the contract, which will be awarded within the next two months by Hull City Council, the only operator of a public telephone system in Britain apart from British Telecom.

The contract is a prestigious one and vital to System X, because the exchange has yet to demonstrate that it can compete effectively in the open market international compe-

More than £150m has been spent on System X's development. Some estimates put the figure at £300m. But although its designers claim a technical superiority for it, the exchange has been embarrassingly slow in establishing a foothold

Recent attempts by designers

The designers of the British - Plessey, GEC and British Telecom - 10 secure contracts in India and China have failed, the West Indies.

> The Hull contract is expected to attract bids from ITT of the US. CIT-Alcatel of France Northern Telecom of Canada, Ericsson of Sweden and the joint venture of AT&T of the US and Philips of Holland.

> British Telecom is committed to spend some of its £2,000m annual investment on the installation of System X in Britain over the next decade. It already operates four exchanges and another six or so will be installed within the next 12

But the British Telecom contracts have added little to System X's commercial pedigree. The failure to secure an independent home contract will place the system's commercial future in serious jeopardy.

It emerged over the weekend that Mr Wickins and a co-director, Mr Alan Curtis, had not seen the group's interim results showing a £109,000 profit compared with a £289,000 loss for the same period last year before they were issued to the press and Mr Wickins was worried about taking responsibility for the figures.

directors of UBM. the builders' merchant, ratified a share option scheme at a board meeting five days before a much-rumoured bid for the group emerged, has raised a number of eyebrows.

Thes directors are now sitting on a paper profit of £389,000.

The share option scheme was drawn up in May, presented to shareholders in June, then approved at the annual meeting on July

In line with the normal procedures, the allocations options on 961,000 shares were decided at the next board meeting after the annual meeting on July 29 and the option price was set in line with the then market price of 81p. The four directors involved accepted the option offer in the next few days and the scheme was ratified on August 5,

It was five days later that Norcros unveiled its 109pa-share takeover bid and stock market speculation pushed UBM shares sharply higher on hopes of a counter-bid. They now stand at 121.5p.

However, the unfortunate aspect to this affair is that the stock market already appeared to have a good idea a bid was on the way.

Speculation in the market

On August 4, for in-stance, the day before the UBM board allocated the options, The Times re-ported: "Talk of a bid of 110p a share sent shares of builders' merchant UBM group racing away op to equal the year's high of 93p yesterday." The previous day UBM shares had risen option on honour The announcement that had foreknowledge of a bid or indeed knew anything that other shareholders did not. Mr Roger Pinnington, UBM chief executive, denies any knowledge of the Norcros bid until the day it appeared and Norcros has confirmed this.

The Times report suggested Pilkington might be the predator but the quesnevertheless arises whether in these circumstances UBM directors should have gone ahead with the share option scheme.

> Of the speculation in the market, Mr Pinnington points out that there have been takeover rumours before. Attempts to discover whether something was afoot this time yielded no evidence of unusual share buying.

Firmly against Norcros bid

In short, there is no reason to suppose that directors had any prior knowledge of a bid.

But the point at issue is a rather different one. It is that share option schemes are meant to be offered as an incentive to management and the purpose of this one was to promote the "future prosperity" of the company by enabling executives involved to identify their interests with those of the shareholders.

Should the Norcros bid succeed, it would be very hard to see how this had been achieved. Given the unfortunate timing of events, it would look more as though directors were receiving compensation of a sort and this was not the reason why shareholders approved the scheme in the first place, nor was that why the scheme was pro-

Without a bid the options are not exercisable for three years and the UBM directors would prefer it stayed that way. They have come out firmly against the Norcros bid and without a bid the controversy would ED AWAY.

In the circumstances, however, the UBM directors would be best advised to waive their rights to the options until the bid battle is over. At the least shareholders should be given another chance to vote on

'Wings' bond warrant launched

By Michael Prest

Wings" - warrants in negotiable government securities - took off in the Eurobond market last week. These are separate investors from their money by offering warrants convertible into United States Treasury bonds.

The warrants are issued by investment banks and securities iouses and are negotiable instruments in bearer form, this preserving the Eurobond marcet's traditional anonymity. After a year the warrants lapse and are worthless, but at any stage in their brief life they are exercisable into specified US Treasury bonds. No coupon is attached to the warrants.

If the price of the related bond rises, the price of the warrant should go up as well and, in theory, the happy investor makes a profit. Since fraction of the price of the cent.

associated security, and without the time and expense of buying US Treasury bonds, they appear to offer a highly attractive and seared way into the Treasury bond market.

But there are reservations, The first is that the investor is taking a view on bond prices, which today effectively means on how the market reads the intentions of the Federal Reserve and the course of interest

Secondly, there is the little matter of the price at which the warrants are exercisable into the bonds. Salomon Brothers, one of the most prestigious names in the market, issued 500,000 warrants last week, half of which are exercisable into US Treasury 10% per cent 2012 (known in the market as the and, in theory, the happy old long bond"). The price of investor makes a profit. Since the warrant is $32.50 for each the warrants are issued at a $1,000 nominal, or 3.25 per

That sounds enticing But Salomon has given notice that the exercise price will be fixed at five points over the price of the bonds tomorrow. If that price is the same as the 87 on Friday, for the sake of argument, for the old long bond, the premium works out at 9.5 per cent. To show a profit, the investor mus assume that yields will fall from more than 12 per cent to less than 11 per cent.

Meaney: his experience

Plenty of people in the Eurobond market have doubts about whether prices will rise by that much. They point out, moreover, that making a merket in the warrants could be difficult, partly because of their novelty, and partly because of uncertainty about their value

But in fairly dull market which has been overshadowed for most of the year by American interest rates, others confess to being more sanguine.

£636,000, a 250 per cent was enough to keep the shares increase on the comparable figure for 1981/1982. Turnover was up by 55 per cent to USM stock to make the change.
Anglo Nordic Holdings, Mr
Brian Wolfson's engineering group, made the jump earlier this year.

Brian Wolfson's engineering the next five years. The shares were up by 28p to 278p on publication of the results. Good Relations, the public relations and advertising agency, was up by 5p at 190p in sympathy. United Packaging was an-other newcomer to please the market with pretax profits of £1m against £996,000 last time, and £195,000 ahead of the forecast made when the comyear. The improvement stemmed largely from a better than expected performance from the group's twining and packaging interests in Zimbabwe, which contributed £656,792. United also say contributed strong growth from the British packaging machinery and stretch film sales operations which have benefited from bumper results.

Leading the way was the advertising agency Wight Collins Rutherford Scott which easily exceeded the forecast made in its USM launch prospectus in January this year.

Pretax profits for the year ing of products.

Group turnover rose from £6.8m to £7m while the board is recommending an increased final dividend of 1.55p per share against the 1.3p originally envisaged. A bullish statement from Mr Ernest Ascher, the ing of products.

Bespak, the Norfolk-based ending April 30 rose to chairman, about current trading manufacturer of aerosol valves, £636,000, a 250 per cent was enough to keep the shares sister company to Mr Asil Nadir's Polly Peck and Wearwell, also increased by 25p to 225p despite poor interim results. Pretax losses increased from £34,934 to £263,266. However, the results relate to the performance of the company's former textile business which was transferred to Polly Peck in May.

The sole activity of the company now is the develop-ment of the Niksar bottling plant in Turkey. Shareholders were assured that the plant would be ready in the autumn for full commercial production at a rate of 43 million bottles each year. Commercial developments in the Middle Eastern markets have enhanced the substantial potential of the investment, the Cornel board Broker Scrimgeour, Kemp-Gee is expecting strong preliminary results tomorrow from Heelamat, the heel bar chain, efforts to strenghen the marketwhich was the first company to join the USM in November 1980. Last year the company disappointed the market with pretax profits of £382,000, half the previous year's. But without the problems caused by last year's rail strikes (much of the commuters) Scrimgeour says that he decline in profits will be halted this time.

Dealings begin today in shares of Real Time Controls, Britain's biggest supplier of electronic point-of-sale systems Simon & Coates, the broker handling the company's launch on the market, is placing about 25 per cent of the company's equity (1.75m shares) at 148p a share. Dealers have indicated that shares should start trading near the £2 level. Mr Barney Carrell, chairman of RTC, says that the profits growth potential for the company "is explosive".

Mr David Haylarr, chairman of New Court Natural resources, a US oil exploration company, said in his annual statement to shareholders published last week, that the company is continuing to examine a number of potential propositions to expand its US

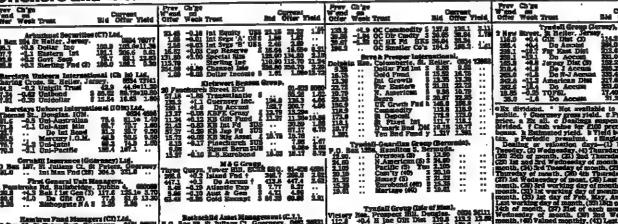

Meanwhile shares of other USM oil stocks continue to ride high on the back of the general rise in oil prices following the announcement of a major find in Irish waters. Saxon Oil shares were up by 18p to 206p on the week, while Sovereign Oil gained 12p to 274p.

Sunny prospect for financial markets

a much more cheery prospect

The big break in the series of bad money supply figures in New York holds out the prospect of a stabilization and then lower interest rates and a weaker dollar.

Last mouth, each week's money number was worse than expected. The disappointment was the more serious because of mounting evidence of a desire on the part of the Federal Reserve to reduce the rate of money growth.

Leading the expectation of lower money growth were notable economists such as Mr Peter Caneld of Merrill Lynch, Mr Robert Sinche of Bear Stearns and Mr Patrick Savin of Drexel Burnham Lambert. They pointed to the slower growth in banks' reserves in the past three

Since June 8, the "adjusted monetary base" (banks' reserves plus currency) rose only $1.3bn. (about £855m). The level of "adjusted bank reserves" peaked in the week of June 8 at just under $35bn and were still only $54.1bn in the week of August 3. Mr Savin said last week:

Since mid-May, both total banks; reserves and non-borrowed reserves have decelerated from 13.2 per cent to 6.2 per cent and from 0.4 per cent to minus 0.6 per cent respectively. Borrowings from the discount window (of the Federal Reserve) by the banks bave virtually doubled from $866m to $1,679m. Thus in about eight weeks, the growth rate of non-borrowed reserves. the raw material of fature money growth, has slowed substantially.

What motivates this tactic?

"In our view, nothing more than an attempt to slow money growth, which has clearly served to destabilize the bond market in the first half of

Despite this evidence of the Fed's desire to slow money growth, the results last mouth were disappointing.
The disappointme

after week added to the fear that money growth was out of control. This intensified the downward trend in bond prices and led to the boom in demand for dollars in the world's foreign exchange markets.

Last week, the informed estimates made by those who specialise in this difficult field were that there would be a rise of about $3ba in M1 for the week of August 3.
As late as Thursday, Dow

Jones capital markets were

The financial markets will face reporting the result of them sarrey that MI would rise by $2,2bu. When the number was announced on Friday - a rice of $400m, there was something just short of jubiliation

The "Bellwether" 12 per cent US Tressury bonds dan in 2013 rose a full 2 points to 182 10/32 on the news and the yield on this band dropped from 11.97 per cent on Thursday to 11.71 per cent. Ninety-day Treasury Bills dropped in yield from 9.49 per cent on Thursday to 9.34 per cent and the six months bills dropped from 9.64 per cent on Thursday to 9.50 per cent.

Taking into account the rise of only $400m in M1 announced on Friday, we can see June 15 to August 3, M1 reserves: $514.5bm to $517.6bm -an increase of $3.1bm, but in the eight weeks to June 15, MI rose $18.3bc.

There was also good news on Friday about the broader money aggregate MZ. In the aths to June, M2 rose Silbn well below the forecast made by informed forecasters who had expected an increase of at least $1.5m last month.

Expressing the general views of experts the outlook for interest rates, Mr Sinche last week forecast that by next spring long term bond yields would be down around 10 per would be down around 8 1/4 -8½ per cent. Mr Sinche also forecast, that the dollar would fall 10-20 per cent against the Deutschemark and the Swiss franc by next year - a view that has been the stuff of Citibank forecasts for some

AND THE PARTY

Thus, with this evidence of slower money growth, the normally expectable results are beginning to flow – lower interest rates, a weaker dollar and better bond prices.

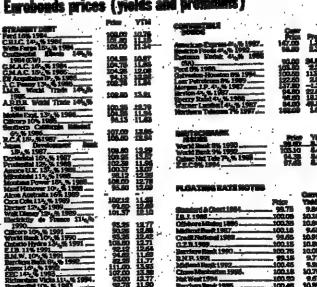

Some fear that this prespec of slower money growth would bring the booming recovery of the United States to an absupt hait. There will however be a rising velocity of the slower growing money stock and a weaker dollar to offset say spek effects. In the normal course of events, the state of growth would necessarily slow down from the 8.7 per cent rise in the second quarter of this year and the expected 8-9 per cent rate of increase in the third quarter.

A rate of growth of 5-6 per cent in the fourth quarter real GNP and 3 per cent in the first quarter of next year is a ensousble estimate

Historical background

The Company was founded by Mr. Also Schumann, the father of two of the present Directors, and until very recently a majority of the share capital has always remained in the ownership of the Schumann family, 6.5 per pent, of the Company's issued stare capital is presently owned by Directors other than the Schumanne and approximately 4.7 per cent. by a company associated with Hambron Bank Limited ("Hambron"), which subscribed for shares in 1871 following the participation in 1987 in the financing of an early stage of Baspak's expansion. In 1958, operating under licence, the Sprup began the assembly and sale in the United Kingdom and, certain other terminates of The Riscipa Menutacturing Company's ("Riscion") range of ascoci valves, consisting of continuous spruy valves for use is astrock containing partimes and cologines and relating valves of the actual of continuous spruy valves for use is astrock containing partimes and cologine associated spray for each depression of the actualor. While valves of the latter type were also used in partimes and cologine associate, there more important application proved to be in the pharmaceutical field. In the vary 1990's Beispak began to replace components, purchased from Fledon with United Kingdom manufacturied components for researce of cost and speed of delivery. Baspak also began improving upon the designs covered by the licence, producing innovations based on those designs and originating specialised valves of its own designs, becoming one of the world's major manufacturers of specialist aerosol valves. The finence and all associated agreements with Relatin wire terminated in 1976.

The Company grew substantially during the latte 1960's and serty 1970's due in particular to the increase

The Company grew substantially during the late 1860's and early 1970's due in particular to the increase in sales of two products incorporating Bespelt's velves. The first was the serced cologine epity pioneered in the United Kingdom by one of Bespelt's outstances, Yardley Manufacturing Limited, and the second was a phemical product for the relief of asthme, the proschodilator Ventolin (a registered trade mark of the Gloss group ("Gloss")). Vertolin was first nectional as an aerosol form with a valve manufactured by Seepak in 1899 by Aflen & Handungs Limited, a subsidiery of Gloss Priority p. p. p. By 1975 also to (first shock) meeting valve for use with this product were expected those of emy other Beepak product despite the fact that the Company has vertained the market feeder in the United Kingdom for the supply of velves for servely perfurnished the despite.

In November, 1982 2,750,000 shares were placed by Hambros and per to take place in the Company's issued shame in the Unlisted Securities Market.

The business

Bespek's principal business consists of the manufacture and asis of several different ranges of specialized serveol valves. Oi, these, phermaceutical metering valves, which are manufactured both in a standard range and in a special version for Gless, accounted for approximately 70 per cent; of Bespek's sales in the financial year ended 29th April, 1983, most of which were to Gless. This range of valves is designed to deliver an accurately measured and repeatable close in a spray fine enough to reach the lungs, and is principally used in inhelation therapy. Bespek is aware of only two appraisant competitors in this market.

Another important product, line is a single of valves for use with perturner and colognet. Although sales of these valves accounted for just under 15 per cent, of Bespek's total sales in the financial year ended 28th April, 1983, they represent wellower that the United Kingdom market for such products. Beapix supplies these valves to most of the major cosmello houses in the United Kingdom including Lemineto, Yardiey, L'Orisi and Fabergé.

th addition to fits two main product lies Bespek menutactures and sells several other types of valves. It supplies the majority of United Kingdom manufacturers of seroted fire extinguishers with a unique range of very high emission rate valves, together with hercies, which for their part are capable of meeting the retevent requirements of the new British Standard for aeroed fire extinguishers. Although this product line only accounted for around 5 per cent. of eales in the financial year ended 25th April, 1968, this Company is increasing production capacity in anticipation of substantial sales growth in the United States.

Bespek also manufactures special valves for specific applications, including valves for butane lighter relifis (for customers such as Ronson and Dunnit) and lock de-loans, valves for use with powders, thick others, mestics and polyusethers foams and a medical catheter valve, all of which together accounted for the remainder of sales in the financial year-anded 29th April, 1983.

The geographical stratysts of turnover is as follows:

United Kingdom Europe-Rest of the world

g skirts a rive

Although approximately 80 per cent. of sales in the Company's financial year ended 29th April, 1983 were to United Kingdom customers, the Directors are aware that a substantial proportion of velves sold in the United Kingdom are incorporated in products which are ultimately exported.

The Group

The Group comprises Bespair, which is the helding company and principal manufacturing company Bertapa Engineering Co. Lanted ("Bertapa"), which operates the plastic injection moulding department, and B.E.S. Technology Limited ("Bestech"), which is responsible for the design and development of much of the specialised machinery used by Bespair and Bertapa:

Bespek produces over 100 milion finished products per annum, using increasingly automated methods to assemble bought in springs, gestells and metal products per annum, using increasingly automated methods to assemble bought in springs, gestells and metal pressings with components injection-moulded by Bertspa in engineering places. There were injection-moulded components in a year under strict quality control. Mould tools are made to extremely fire tolerances, usually in the Company's own toulcome. The Company is also a leader in its field at the use of computerised normals. Administration and production controls are based on an extensively developed BM installation and the Company has invested in a socializated Company Automated (CNC) meeting acceptable to administration and the tool meeting atoms, principally a order to accelerate detail design of the product, tool design and the tool meautischuring processes, thus enabling the Company to respond more quickly to customers' requirements. The Oirectors believe that one of Bespek's strengths is its highly developed lengthering processes which has resulted in the Company acquaing a registable of a profiler for strengths for earlier bounds in components and

Although the Company relies upon a small number of suppliers for certain bought in components and materials a policy of seeking additional sources for critical components is actively pursued. However, the testing of elternative materials or components for use in pharmaceutical applications is invariebly protracted. In order to cament as leading relationship with a major supplier the Company has recently acquired an approximate 27 per cent. stampholding in R. C. Bull Rubber Co. Limited.

The Company's marketing approach is based on a five year plan designed to achieve profit growth and reduce dependence on any one customer. Bespek's position as a supplier to specialist market segments means that close personal contact can be maintained with customers by a small professional sales shall becked up by a technical support service. Three sales executives are responsible for the United Kingdom and a fourth for visiting overseas customers, particularly is Europe. Many overseas tentiories used to be covered by agency services but the Company/has recently taken over direct responsibility for a number of these, including the agreements but the Company/has recently taken over direct responsibility for a number of these, including the spread of the last on which it will be particularly concentrating. Selling agencies still exist in parts of Eastern Europe and the Par East and it Canada, South America, Japan and South Africa. The Company, has a representative in the United States as part of its plan for major expansion there. It is Bespek's policy to maintain close contacts in the United States as part of its plan for major expansion there. It is Bespek's policy to maintain close contacts with customers and potential oustomers so that its knowledge of their requirements is as complete and up to date as possible, thus enabling Bespek continuely to develop its product ranges so as to meet these accurances.

The Ventolin valve

Bespek's range of phermaceutical valves includes a special form of metering valve for use with Ventolin, and in the transcal year ended 20th April, 1983 sales of these valves to Glaso accounted for approximately 60 per cent, of Bespek's sales. While Glaso purchases seroed valves from other manufacturers for use with other products, Betpek is Glazo's sole supplier of valves for Ventolin.

Following the exponent of Vertician by the United States Food and Drug Administration to term of such approved being the accorporation in the product of the Bespak valve), Glavo commenced selling Vertician in the United States in 1931. By agreement with Glavo, Schering-Plough Corporation ("Schering") also manufactures under States in 1931. By agreement with Glavo, Schering-Plough Corporation ("Schering") also manufactures and sells a similar product there, under the name Proventil. Bespak has agreed with Glavo not to sell the Vertician valve order than to Glavo but with Glavo's consent is now supplying Scheringwith this valve for use with Proventil and other pooducts. This extension of the merket for the Vertician valve should result in a substantial increase in Bespak a sales.

There is no agreement between Glaso or Schering and Bespek requiring either Glaso or Schering to purchase values from Bespek but the Directors consider it most unlikely that any other suitable value could be made available to Glaso or Schering by another manufacturer for at least several years. Although the patents covering the design of the special value used with Verticils have expired, there are cortain special leatures and elements of facturized expertise involved in the valve's manufacture which, the Directors consider, would make it an extremely difficult product to copy. In addition, the special valve is the only one which has been officially approved both in the United Kingdom and in the United States, as well as widely throughout the rest of the world, for dispensing Ventolin and any alternative valve produced would be required to undergo a long period of testing and approved by manufacturers and regulatory authorities before it could be substituted for the Beepek valve.

Future developments

As mentioned above, the potential market for Ventolin and Proventil in the United States is very large and sven if those products obtain only a small ahere of the market, Respek's sales of valves to Glaso and Schering should increase substantially. The Directors also foresee growing United Kingdom and export sales to other pharmaceutical companies of Bespek's range of metering valves suitable for inhalation therapy products.

Arction United States market which the Directors believe het substantial potential is that for served his addinguishers incorporating Bespatt valves and handles. Approvels for these fire extinguishers are being sought from appropriate testing bodies and it is articipated that the granting of these would result in a substantial harves in tales.

The Company is experiencing continuing growth in sales of perturne valves and related devices in Europe and is at an advanced stage in the development of lower cost metering valve systems for less demanding non-etrical applications white continuity seeking areas into which it can diversity by realong use of its assisting precision moulding technology and marketing and angineering experies. The Company's substantial research and development effort will continue to be used to explore possibilities for increasing sales by meeting requests from customers for special products or for variations on existing products but these are only manufactured in cases where the return to the Company is expected to be adequate.

Premises

The Company owns the treshold of a site of approximately 7.7 acres on the North Lynn Industrial Estate, King's Lynn, Nortolic on which it that three buildings. The Company moved into two factory buildings on this site in 1975, one of which was a 20,000 square feet rented building on a site of approximately 3.3 acres and the other of which was a 25,000 square feet building constructed for the Company on an adjoining site of approximately 4.4 acres, the freshold of which had previously been bought by Bespett. The freshold of the rented properly was acquired in 1979 and in 1980 the Company moved into an additional building of 45,000 square feet eracted for it to a design incorporating various introvetions which have produced a more pleasant and efficient working environment leading to a greater integration of production and administrative functions. This latest building houses assembly operations, quality control, mentionance, main stores and despetch and most of the management and office staff. The 25,000 square feet building houses the miscalon-moulding and tool malong departments and the 20,000 square feet building accommodules the research and development department.

The Directors consider that this site is capable of carrying at least a further 40,000 square feet of buildings in satisfactorily landscaped surroundings and have already put in hand site clearance preparatory to the erection of an extension to the factory.

than even revised expectations and MI growth during the rest of August is also expected to show signs of slowing.

There is still concern that US interest rates will eventually move higher but the cacourag-ing money supply figures have at least raised hopes that the next upward movement can be delayed.

The reaction of financial markets to last Friday's better-than-expected US money supply figures will be keenly awaited this week. The rise of $400m in MI was much less than even privated expectations.

This, in turn, could lead to and the upward trend in US rates, but any sign of these potential problems abating is likely to be welcomed by British financial markets.

In adding as he did Daley Thompson, the world title to last year's Commonwealth and European, Cram has established himself as one of the supreme tactical competitors of his sport. He remarked afterwards that he the world so long as he keeps on

It remains to be seen whether Coe, who is a year younger than Ovett, can remount a challenge in next year's Olympics, at either 1,500 or of 5,000 metres. Ther were many in the stadium vesterday who could not believe Ovett, the world record holder and Olympic 800 metres champion, who had seemingly returned to fitness wih a really fast time this year, could fail to win a medal. Yet the view before the heats that Cram. Steve Scott, and Said Aouita were the form favourites and that Ovett's Indian summer was clouded by doubt had gained ground by the time the semifinals were run and was emphatically confirmed in the ballerina skirts, the gleam of gold and bronze for Britain's athletes, and a flash of green from an old friend, Eamonn

Kathy Cook emerged from the doldrums in which she had found herself this season, with so little top competition, to win a bronze medal in the 200 metres. Mrs Cook had shown little of the form that brought her European and Common-wealth silver medals at this distance last year, and she gave herself no more chance than reaching the final.

Mrs Cook provided an amusing diversion when she was one of the athletees selected for a dope test afterwards. The heat of competition, and of the return of good weather, meant that she had to drink a little more liquid, in this case beer, than would have been wise in order to provide her sample for testing.

The medal ceremony was delayed and she swayed on to the rostrum as her husband, Gary, helped the British 4x400 metres team to a bronze, the second relay medal for Britain

Yet, like Colin Reitz, they owe it to the tendency of some American athletes not, simply to sway, but to fail down. Henry

Marsh did fall over a barrier to let Reitz in for a bronze medal in the steeplechase, but Sunder

Nix was simply carrying a baton in a flat race when he fell on the top bend of the last lap when trying to take the lead. That let Todd Bennett into third place.

Bennett handed over to Phil

Brown, and aithough the Soviet Union and West Germany were already well away, Brown repulsed the charge on the anchor leg of Edwin Moses, the 400 metres hurdles gold medal

Allan Wells had the galling experience, as in Moscow, of losing by one hundredth of a second to Pietro Mennea, of Italy. In Moscow it was for gold, but vesterday it was for bronze. So Wells, after a fine comeback after so many injuries this season, has had to settle for two fourth places in the sprints. Coghlan had become one of those old friends, of whom one Coghlan would finally win something. He did it with a

into it not only sustained finishing pace, but a realization

The pace had become as pedestrian in the third kilometre as the first lap of the

1.500 metres had been, Julian Goater, Britain's only remain-

Coghlan ran the last four laps in just over four minutes, a legacy of his long tenure as a member of the exclusive top milers club, setting himself up for a victory which he was determined to savour. As he passed Dimitriev on the final bend, he looked around at the Soviet athlete and clenched both of his fists in front of him as he realized that he was going to have no competition Coghlan then accelerated down the finishing straight, and had built up such a gap with 50 metres left that he was able to minutes in the first world back of the flock. Ovett looked championships yesterday, two comfortable, as indeed he notable eras came to a close, should at such pace, with two pushed up with the leaders. It was on the fourth bend that Cramm began to move out from sixth position, Aouita with him, and down the second lastt back straight they had closed in behind Kubista, Zdravkovic and Becker. Rounding the bend, Cram jumped to third; coming off the bend Aouita shot through inside and led at the bell from Cram, Scott and Abascal with Ovett boxed in, eighth, behind Boit (Kenya) and through. There was none.

At no time in any of his does not care if he never holds major victories between 1977 and 1981 had Ovett ever been winning, and it is an attitude more than two or three yards off which will enlist wide approval.

Yet it has to be said that the far off now suggested a physical slow starting pace - similar to rather than mental problem, the leading pace; that he was so though he would say later that anxiously searching for a way

Into the last back straight. Aouita led Cram who briefly glanced behind at Scott, a yard or so down. On the final bend Ovett clashed with Kubista as he battled to get through but was all of 10 yards adrift as Cram surged into a two-yard lead over Aouita entering the final straight with Scott's strength now beginning to tell. Cram. 3min 41.59sec, was clear and not fading but Aouita's brave bid, like Straub's in Moscow could not be sustained (3min 42.02sec) and the silver was Scott's by a yard or so (3min 41.87sec). Cram said: "With 200 to go I sensed no one was in direct contact behind so I made my effort, I expected them to come back at me, but they didn't. I hope its not the end of an era -Steve Ovett was not at his best. Only eight weeks ago I had thought '83 would be a disaster for me,"

There had been a poignancy in Mary Decker winning the women's race while her estranged husband and coach, laps, and that is always likely in Ron Tabb. unaware of events contemporary racing. Cram back at the stadium was for a revealed afterwards that he had received prior information that Aouita, fastest man of the year, had won the 3,000 in a thrilling planned to make his effort from finish and now repeated the 100 metres before the bell, so he performance with equal based his own council on that based his own council on that panache. For the best part of three laps she led from Zajtseva (USSR), Dorio (Italy) and Wendy Sly (Great Britain). With 300 metres to go. Zajtseva put in a burst, was held off, but then sained two yards round the last bend. Zajtseva's head was rolling and her elbows going wide as Miss Decker came back

The man with all the talents

There is a passage in a recent book on Daley Thompson, called "The Subject is Winning", by Skip Rozen, in which the world's great all-round athlete says that he owes the public authing - in the way of favours, autographs, valuable time, public comment - other than the best be can do the next time be competes, David Miller writes. The debt is beginning to mount heavily in his favour.

Though it is one of the unfortunate coincidences of the unfortunate coincidences of the decathlon that it is never staged with any significance in Britain, it was a fact that Thompson was more appreciated by the Finnish crowd here for what he is, a truly phenomenal competitor in championships, as Jurgen Hingsen, of West German, learnt to his cost for the second successive year.

Triumph for Renault is led by victorious Prost

Brahham-BMW of Nelson Picquet.

Picquet is still Prost's closest challenger for the title with four races to ran, but the Renault driver now has a useful cushion of 14 points at the top of the table. The race was a comprehensive success for Renault who not only saw Eddie for Renault, who not only saw Eddie Cheever finish a close fourth in their second car, but an impressive return to engine reliability after their worrying weekend in Germany meant that Nigel Mansell, having started the race in an impressive third place on the grid, headed only by the two Ferraris, took fifth place for the left by the life starts.

Mansell, however, was a full lap behind at the finish, having fought a gallant battle with tyres which were no match for those wore by Rensults, Ferraris and Brabhams on the day. With only half of the 26-car field surviving to the finish, and Alain Prost took a valuable further step towards his eagerly sought World Championship yester-day when he won the Austrian Grand Prix by a margin of 6.8sec over Repe Amoux, whose Ferrari finished a further 2 isec clear of the Beablagu RMW of Nelson Picquet.

The race looked likely to be a Ferrari benefit in the first half, with Tambay setting the pace, and Piques challenging Arnoux's second place. This was the pattern for many laps until Tambey was held up badly by Jarier, who seemed to be driving with blinkers and blacked-out mirrors a kap behind the field.

Tambay became completely boxed in as he tried desperately to get by, and both Arnoux and Piquet were able to slip by in the traffic jam. Tambay fought back into the lead again, but held it only briefly before driving slowly to his pit with smoke trailing from his car.

After the mid-race pit stops. Piquet held a narrow lead ahead of Arnoux as Prost gradually closed in. On lap 38, with 15 to go, both Arnoux and Prust displaced Piquet.

their Prost moved in on the new leader, whom he contrained soon after to slip into first place. It was a hand-fought race with Fermi, Renault, Brabham-RMW and - now — Louis proving remarkably will matched on the very first chronic for as long as their tyres remained fresh. It angure well for the season's four remaining race.

On Saturday night Ballesteros had said, softly, that he was desperately tired, and in need of a bit of breathing space: "People can guess how I feel, but they don't really know." Jones visits the canvas for the first time in his career

Thomas lashes out at Jones verdict

S450.000. Colin Jones, of Gorsemon in Wales, was not surprisingly a bitterly disappointed fellow.

On the one hand, after what must surely have been the hottest afternoon's work of his life, he had acquitted himself in more than honourable fashion under the canopied furnace of the Dunes flotel stadium and deserved his rich reward. On the other, it was Milton McCrory, a lean, speedy bover from Detroit, where they are now turning watched their hero take a left hook flush on the jaw. Down went Jones McCrory, a lean, speedy boxer from Detroit, where they are now turning out championship contenders with the alacrity of assembly-line cars, who has laid claim to the World Boxing Council welterweight championship bolt, once the property of Sugar Ray Leonard.

As anyone who watched the Saturday night televised contest must have noted, it was so close - a split decision, to be precise - and the streets of South Wales must have echoed into the wee small hours of Sunday with that familiar 'we was robbed" anthem.

I must agree, for my eard gave Jones a two-point edge over McCrory. One judge, Anselmo Ewobedo, from Venezuela, gave it to McCrory 115 to 111; Judge Ray Solis, from Mexico, scored it 115 to 114 while the third judge, Angel Tovar, of Panama, had Jones winning by 115 to 114.

Minutes after it was all over. Jones muttered a few words of congratulations to the new champun and sobbed into a tower part frustration, part anger and part disappointment. Later, nursing a beer at the hotel poolside in cooler temperatures of only 85°F - the bout was held in heat of around 107° - he listened as his manager Eddie Thomas, who has come close to the mountain top with other boxers, aid pasionately: "I'm outraged. The verdict stank and so did the Jones also thought the crown was his and said he had performed better than in Reno last March when he drew with McCrory for the vacant title. "I thought I'd won", he said, "McCrory worked well for four founds and he sailened and ten for rounds and he galloped and ran for the rest. From the seventh onwards I felt I was the only one in the hout professional career that he had been on the canvas.

Later, he explained:"It wasn't a big punch, although it might have looked a devastating one, it was a shock and it caught me while I was still cold." Devastating or not, Jones proceeded with great caution for the next few rounds and came alive midway through the contest. Round seven was his big one, his left began to connect with ferocious force and his body punches found their target.

McCrory's face was masked in hout professional career that he had McCrory's face was masked in blood from his nose and mouth and the bout turned dramatically for Jones. He was in complete command. You could almost hear

Gorytus holds centre stage as York spectacular begins

By Michael Phillips, Racing Correspondent

After the fine racing at Newbury the spotlight switches to York where this weck's three-day meeting has all the makings of the high spot of the racing month. There are two races of real significance on each day and plenty in support. Tomorrow the limelight will be divided between the Benson and Hedges Gold Cup and the Yorkshire Oaks, each of group one status.

Sharcef Dancer will be attempting to emulate Troy and Assert and become the third winner of the Irish.

Eddery calm on South Atlantic

Twenty-four years ago Vincent O'Brien was about to give up the training of jumpers to concentrate on the flat when he saddled Little the Curragh on Saturday he won this particular Pattern race for the fourteenth time, our Irish Correspondent writes.

His winner on this occasion was Robert Sangster's South Atlantic, purchased as a yearling for a European record price of 640,000 guineas. Pat Eddery gave a masterful exhibition of how to ride a race in front, dictating the gallop from start to finish.

Gala Event, who convincingly won the Anglescy Stakes, is likely to challenge for the Cheveley Park Stakes at Newmarket in the autumn.

At Newbury on Saturday Yawa was made favourite to win the St Leger after he had finished third to Khairpour and Castle Rising in the Geoffrey Freer Stakes. While conceding that his was a good run, all things considered - he had missed some work because of a skin rash: the pace was slow; the distance was too short - his promotion looks a trifle prematue considering that Teenoso will be in the field.

The gallop that Castle Rising set on Saturday was also too slow for his own good, as a result of which he will probably have a pacemeker in the St Leger. He will certainly need the St Leger. He will certainly need something to his advantage because he will be meeting Yawa on 8lb worse terms at Doncaster and that for a length and a half will be a big disadvantage. Well though Castle Rising stuck to his task in the straight, he never looked like holding Khairpour just so long as one could be sure that that upredictable horse did not go and do something stupid as at York in May when he threw away his chance of winning the Yorkshire Cup by swerving all over the course. swerving all over the course.

On Saturday John Reid said that he was as happy as you ever can be on Khairpour. The result saw a smile of relief crease trainer Fulke Johnson Houghton's face after a frustrating spell. Millfontaine and Gay Lemur reproduced their Goodwood form almost to within an ounce to finish first and third in the ATS Trophy. Aparently Millfontaine was his owner Stavros Niarchos's ninety-fifth winner in England and France this season. On Saturday John Reid said that England and France this season, which is not a bad strike rate, even more borses in training in a year than you or I have not dinners.

Deanville Paul de Moussac, one of France's leading owners-breeders, won his first group one event when Luth Enchantee came with a devastating late run to defeat L'Emigrant a length and a half in yesterday's one mile Prix Jacques le Marois here.

This daughter of Be My Guest, has changed out of all recognition since she had been raced on firm ground and on straight courses. Just cight days ago she dominated her rivals in the group two Prix d'Astarte, and yesterday afternoon she showed a clean pair of heels to nine opponents in the Jacques le Noalcoholic led up the centre of the course, followed by Crystal Glitters, Ma Biche and Luth Enchantee. On the rails L'Emigrant led Montekin and Bold Run two furlongs out. Alfred Gibert produced Crystal Glitters on the outside of Noalcoholic, and the pair leable destrict the invalved in the looked certain to be involved in the finish. However Maurice Philip-peron produced Luth Enchantee on the wide outside and the filly showed a magnificent turn of foot to defeat L'Emigrant by a length and a half, with Montekin, two lengths away third in front of Ma Biche and

Jacko Cunnington will probably pext run Luth Enchantee in the group one Prix du Moulin de Longchamp on September 4. Gavin Pritchard-Gordon considered the ground far too firm for Noalcoholic and thought the stewards should have an inquiry when Luth have an inquiry when Luth Enchantee veered across his horse 300 yards from the post. He remarked: "Today's ground was like a road surface, and I hope Noalcoholic is not hurt. If all is well, he will go for the Waterford Crystal, but will end his racing career with the Challenge Stakes at New-market."

The Times Guide to career training

A crisis could shape a career

rejoice at the achievement or required

Despite the efforts of careers cachers and advisers, the six weeks following the results are a bediam of crisis and uncertainty. What could be an orderly adjustment to a sensible contingency plan often ends up as panic and rout as parents scramble to find alternatives for their offspring.

Although the UCCA system works olerably well for university adarrangements in other sectors of higher education could hardly have been worse planned. With a lack of coordination which effectively encourages students to behave irresponsibly in their applicenave interponsibily in their appu-cations, there is no sure way of knowing which places are going to be filled, particularly at polytechnics, until the first day of term. Conse-quently many students are tempted to grab and hold on to more than one offer thereby making a difficult situation éven more confused than it need he. When it comes to crude numbers things are definitely tighter.

tighter this year than they have been for a long time. The grades required by admissions tutors in their conditional offers have gone up - often, it would seem, by several points (where an A counts for ive points and an E for one). At the University of Surrey, for example, a number of courses (including their much prized prestige Degree in Home Economics) have been closed down. The total of places generally has reduced and the number of Appli-

The next six weeks can be a time of crisis and uncertainty for A level candidates who have not done well. In a series of four articles, Edward Fennell advises on how to make the best of a disappointin g start in higher education.

cants has increased. Their method of selection has become more stringent. It could be argued that this is all to the good and that it was about time the calibre of students in higher education was raised so as to slice off the mediocre. It is an argument which is raging already especially as A level results have been shown to be no predictors of final degree class. In any case there is a realistic claim that as a country we need to raise to a high standard as many young people as meanwhile the immediate problem is how best to manipulate the system so as to get on a course which is going to be of long term benefit.

The first question has to be whether higher education is necessarily the best thing. In a number of career areas these days it may well be better to get in post-'A' level, when less maybe expected and the competition may not be as tough, rather than delaying three or four years only to be in a mêlee with thousands of other fresh graduates. So when revising your plans the key decision has to be whether higher education is really necessary.

When you make your decision, you need to make a quick excursion around the available options. You may well want to make use of UCCA clearing but only a minority are likely to be successful there. Instead the time has come to delve into the world of polytechnics in Northern manufac-turing towns, into the Higher National Diplomas of the Business and Technician Education Council, and the Diplomas in Higher Education - all of which entitle the students to mandatory awards and are fully part of the higher education provision.

Fortunately there are people available to help. Each year the Department of Education and Science coordinates the Advanced and Further Education Information Service (AFEIS) which provides up-to-date details of where vacancies are still on offer. Regular bulletins are sent out to Local Advisory Officers, numbering this year more than a thousand, who will be operating mostly from the offices of Local Education Authority Careers Services. To get access to this vacancy information and to have an advisory interview all you need do is to contact the local Careers Service for an appointment.

If there is any consolation at all in undertaking a rethink of plans following A level then it is that it provides an opportunity to take stock of medium to long-term career goals. Because of the changes in the employment market, the tightness and competitivness of traditional professions like the law, and the problems encountered by pure arts and social science graduates, it could well be that it is a better long-term bet to take a less fashionable degree or diploma course which is well-rooted in the real world and has good links, through sandwich or industrial placements, with industry or com-

Two aspects of war, unfortunately overlapping each other tonight. THE ZIMBABWE TAPES (Radio 4, 8.00 pm), David Caute's drama documentary, is set amid the wer over Rhodesia/Zimbabwe between 1978 and 1980, it concerns the role of propagands and the refraction of truth. Pater Jeffrey plays a white farmer captured by Robert Mugabe's guerillas and forced to record their armed struggle, to counteract his previous propag broadcasts, interestingly, most of the sound inserts in the play were actually taped by the author during the war, and catalogue the experiences of villagers and 'freedom fighters'. pm), World in Action follows up the cruel fate of housewife and mother Baine Evens, whom we last met when her Royal Marine husband Ken had sailed off to war in the South Atlantic. "Like a bad penny, he'll probably turn up again", his womed wife reassured herself. But just four days after her prediction was screened, Ken Evans was klied, in an Argentinian air raid. Statistically, he was one of 250 British servicemen who forsook their aves for the Falklands. Tonight's report asks his widow what his loss has meant to the family, one of whom is a Marine cadet as his father once was. Mrs Evens recalls the happy scenes of reconciliation for other tamilies when the Task Force returned trailing clouds of glory. She also reminds us of the harrowing choice faced by all the widows, on where their husbands should be buried. Ken remained, in a corner supposedly now forever Britain, and his widow explains how important it is for her visit his grave and the spot where he fell.

Looking back with the Great Western

By Kenneth Gosling
When the photographers of the Great Western Railway went out with their plate cameras at the turn of the century they brought back not only pictures of trains, statious and newly-appointed station-masters but a unique record of life in town and country.

Their glass negatives gathered dust in hundreds of boxes stored at Paddington station. west London. Little of their work appeared on seaside posters or as views in railway carriages.

Now Mr Alan Brock, a photographic consultant, has begun cataloguing and processing a quarter of a million retrieved storage as part of a venture by British Rail and the Oxford Publishing Company, Mr. Brock, aged 52, had rwice been made redundant when he heard of the collection. His task could last many years and it is bound to add immeasurably to pictorial knowledge of British life between the late 1880s and the

Mr Brock: Cataloguing the past.

The pictures include many that are not identified because photographers did not list them.

The ladies having a chat look Weish but Mr Brock cannot be certain; the railway ganger on his self-propelled trolley is certainly vintage 1900: and there is no dispute that the magnificently decor-ared and furnished apartment was once Queen Victoria's official station waiting room at Windsor, Mr Brock has already produced subject lists of many categories in the collection. From one ledger alone be produced 10,000 items.

His lists are available to anyone who cares to send him a stamped self addressed envel-ope to 302 Holdenhurst Road. Bournemouth, Dorset.

Andropov breaks with the seaside routine Where do Russian leaders 1823, and produces the only

o in summer? The traditional answer is the Black Sea, although in this (as in other things) Mr Andropov seems to have a style of his own.

The first elite dachas at Sochi were built at the turn of the century. The Tsar's pseudo-Renaissance palace at Livadia, along the coast at Yalia, was completed in 1911. It served as the site of the 1945 Yalia conference, no doubt because Stalin liked the climate (even in February).

Khrushchev preferred palm-fringed Pitsunda, on the Georgian Black Sea coast, but Brezhnev moved the Kremlin's summer headquarters back to the Crimea, and spent many an August sailing, sunbathing and receiving foreign guests at Oreanda, looking for all the world like one of President Nixon's less savoury business companions, in his windcheater and dark

Each new Soviet leader always finds fault with his summertime arrangements, so that the whole paraphernalia of presidential communications, including the hotline to the White House, has to be carted off to some new specially-equipped dacha.

Mr Andropov has full access to the Polithuro Crimean dachas. But he seems to prefer to spend his leisure time (when he has any) in the mountains of his native

Mr Andropov has a new and fully-equipped dacha just outside Moscow, so that he can enjoy the woods and the Moscow River while being able to dash down to the Kremlin in a convoy of black limousines if the need arises.

He also has a presidential flat not far from the city centre, on the same street as The Times office, but does not often use it, possibly because it now bears a plaque saying: "Leonid Hyich Brezhnev lived

But when the sun sparkles above the mountain lakes and meadows of the Caucasus, Mr Andropov is drawn to the spa of Kislovodsk, about 3,000 ft above sea level. Kislovodsk is not far from the Soviet leader's birthplace in the Stavropol region.

It has long been a centre for the treatment of nervous and cardiac disorders, not to mention kidney complaints and diabetes, all of which sounds like a summary of Mr Andropov's last check-up.
The spa was founded in drinkable Russian mineral water, called Narzan. At the exclusive sanatorium at Red Stones (so named because of the red sandstone formations: there are also grey stones and blue stones) VIPs can take a rest cure while gazing at a backcloth of snow-capped peaks and mountain greenery.

Or they can take the waters at the spa. with its English Gothic revival (1849) and Indian imperial (1903) style buildings.

Both the spas in the Caucasus and the beach resorts of the Black Sea are popular with less clevated Russians, although the accommodation and service are somewhat less exclusive.

In Russia there is no question of checking into the hotel of your choice. Factories and offices across the Soviet Union issue "houses of rest" and sanatoria.

The conditions may be sparse, but pulyovkas are much sought after, and holidaymakers say they live like kings for a few weeks compared to the drudgery of their

Most Russians expect their leaders to live well and do not seem to resent ostentatious privilege (not aloud at any

As they sunbathe at Suchi and Sukhumi, Soviet holiday-makers are aware that their leaders enjoy a more luxurious lifestyle behind well-guarded walls, but say there is not much they can do about it and admit they would probably do the same if they were in in this sense, Mr Andropov while satisfyingly stern and disciplinarian over public policy, is rather disappointingly austere and spartan in private life. Russians indentify rather more with Brezhnev. who unashamedly enjoyed the good life.

Not long before he died he invited a foreign communist leader to his Crimean dacha and sat with him on the vast and otherwise empty beach. Drinking cognac brought out by the dacha servants and listening to dissident songs on a portable gramophone. Brezhnev was observed by a Moscow intellectual who was holidaying on a VIP beach near by.

It is difficult to imagine the Narcan-sipping Mr Andropov either getting mellow on the beach over a bottle of cognac or allowing anyone to get close enough to watch him.

Herons still stand on their nests though their young are fully grown and can only be distinguished by their grey heads and rudimentary cress. Sometimes a flock of 10 or 12 crests. Sometimes a flock of 10 or 12 will set off to feed together; they call to each other with a duck-like quack, rather than the usual deep honk of a solitary bird. Lapwings are beginning to arrive from the Continent; the first flocks consist mainly of young birds who have set off ahead of their parents. Starlings wheel in the air like swallows, in pursu-it of flying insects. Blackbirds are moulting they look like worn velvet cushions.

In the hedges, berries are rip ening. Most hawthorn berries are still apple-green, but some have a dark-red flush. There is a wash of orange on the rowan berries; the poisonous berries of bittersweet, or woody nightshade, are already a brilliant scarlet.
